N.Y. Pact Accepted In Strike

Agreement May Let Newspapers Publish Soon

NEW YORK (UPI) — Publishers and negotiators for striking deliverers reached a tentative contract agreement Friday night that could mean an early end of a 17-day strike against nine major daily newspapers which has cost an estimated 34 million dollars in lost revenue and wages.

The agreement was announced by a spokesman for the striking 4,500-member Newspaper and Mail Deliverers Union.

SUBJECT TO VOTE

He added, however, that the agreement was subject to ratification by the rank-and-file in secret ballot. A previous agreement that was reached by negotiators was rejected by a slim margin in a membership vote.

The agreement was announced after nearly 12 hours of talks in the offices of the Federal Mediation Service.

The union spokesman said the agreement with the New York City Publishers Assn., representing the newspapers that have been closed by the strike, was reached shortly before 9 p.m. e.s.t.

Two subcommittees from each side had met earlier, giving rise to hopes that negotiators were nearing an area of agreement. Those meetings were preceded by separate sessions by representatives of publishers and the union.

Federal Mediation Chief Joseph F. Finnegan returned from Washington to join in the talks.

The independent deliverers' union went on strike Dec. 9 after rejecting a contract offer that included a $7 a week raise over a two-year period.

The union, which originally demanded a $9 a week increase, has since indicated it would accept.

Flaming Holiday Tragedy Brings Death To Girl, 9

RUSTON (Special) — Sometimes when a family is drawn closer together by the warmth of the Christmas season, its relations are suddenly strained by tragedy that strikes with cruel swiftness.

Such is the case of the R. D. Jimmerson family whose nine-year-old daughter was fatally burned when she went to light a new dress she donned early Christmas morning as the family gathered to open their presents.

Little Donna Marie Jimmerson will be buried this morning at 10:30 with services at the Wesley Chapel Methodist Church.

The girl left her residence to visit her grandmother, Mrs. R. Y. Martin about 7 a.m. Thursday.

Mrs. Martin lives about 100 yards from the Jimmersons and received her granddaughter.

But with the joy of the occasion came tragedy.

Donna Marie's dress caught fire and she ran to her grandmother's bedside. The woman could not smother the flames and the little girl ran towards home.

She was burned over 80 per cent of her body and lived just 34 hours after she was injured. Death came shortly after 3 p.m. Friday.

Grandfather Martin was not at home when Donna Marie was burned.

Besides her parents and maternal grandparents, Donna Marie is survived by three sisters, Sherry Jean, Faith Laverne, and Dianne Dawn; two brothers, Robert David and Bobby Joe; her paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Jimmerson of Clay.

The body will lie in state at the Kilpatrick Funeral Home until time for services at the Wesley Chapel. Interment will be in the church cemetery.

Underground Blast Fatal For Worker

CHICAGO (UPI) — An underground explosion blew a workman 110 feet to his death and smashed Christmas tree ornaments throughout a Chicago neighborhood late Friday.

A second workman standing at the entrance of a tunnel leading to a sewer site, was injured severely by flying bricks and rocks.

The body of Joseph J. Lesko, 47, was blown 70 feet out of the tunnel and 40 feet from its base by the blast at the bottom of the 30-foot shaft on Chicago's Northwest Side.

There was no warning before the explosion and Frank Stephens, 38, standing at the top of the shaft, had no chance to duck the blast of debris. He was taken to Resurrection Hospital.

Mediation Chief Says Pilots May End Strike Soon

CHICAGO (UPI) — The chairman of the National Mediation Board conferred with leaders of 1,500 striking American Airlines' pilots Friday and announced he was hopeful the walkout might end "within the next few days." Mediation head Leverett Edwards said in Washington he felt "more optimistic now about a settlement than we have since the strike began."

C. N. Sayen, president of Air Lines Assn. (AFL-CIO) refused to mirror Edwards' optimism.

CLARIFICATION

"The only thing discussed was the proposal forwarded earlier by Mr. Edwards," Sayen said. "There were some points on that proposal that needed clarification." Sayen would not say just which of the 12-proposed settlement points were involved. A pilot, however, said he understood that clarification had been asked "on only a few" of the 12.

Edwards said the three-member mediation board had conferred via telephone with "ALPA leaders" on the week-old strike which has grounded the nation's biggest fleet of domestic airliners.

Sayen commented: "I have no idea where Mr. Edwards derived his opinion of the strike's ending from." Sayen told United Press International.

American Airlines officials accepted the mediators' proposal on Tuesday, but the union has continued. A Washington source, however, said there appeared to be growing sentiment within the union to accept the proposal.

Careful

We are delighted to know that no loss of life through automobile accidents occurred on Christmas in the Monroe area.

It appears that many are becoming more careful about taking chances that could result in loss of life. Automobile drivers are to be complimented for the greater degree of caution they have apparently assumed.

Fine Task

Good Fellows performed a fine task this year and the sum raised ranks close to the highest figure ever recorded here to help those who otherwise would have no Christmas time.

Jack Hesketh, who had charge of investigating the needy cases, and who, along with B. B. Martin, worked to see that each package was wrapped and distributed correctly, commented he felt sure this year's output will rank near the top.

Gift

A downtown business firm had a Christmas tree for its employees and each drew a number and purchased a gift without knowing who the gift was for.

When time came for the distribution, one male employee with 15 grandchildren received a book, "How To Become A Grandmother."

REPORT ON PROJECT

Astronomers Plan 'Moon Road Map'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Navy astronomers said Friday they were finishing work on a survey which eventually may provide a roughly sketched road map for the man who lands on the moon.

The survey by the U.S. Naval Observatory was expected to furnish a starting point for production of contour maps showing the sizes of mountains, valleys and hills on the moon's surface.

Chester B. Watts, astronomer at the observatory here, reported on the project at the opening session of the 1959 meeting of the American Assn. for the Advancement of Science (AAAS).

Some 5,000 scientists in fields ranging from astronautics to zoology are attending the six day meeting which will feature papers on an assortment of topics by 1,500 authors.

Missing Balloon Reports

Four Land Safe After Crossing Atlantic Ocean

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — The British plastic balloon Small World is reported to have bumped to a safe landing in the Orinoco delta after a mostly silent two weeks of buffeting across the Atlantic.

The Venezuelan Communications Ministry reported Friday night it had been informed the balloon successfully completed its slowpoke, no-engine feat of the atomic, jet and space age.

All four occupants, including a woman, were reported down safe on the Venezuelan coast.

PASS TARGET

A landing there meant they overshoot their intended target, Barbados Island in the Windwards of the West Indies, but only by about 300 miles; that they were carried along by trade winds at an average 10 m.p.h., and that their reckoning of drift southwestward was just about correct.

Columbus on his third voyage of discovery in 1498 was the first European to sight the Orinoco, and it took him many weeks to reach there across the Atlantic. The balloon apparently made it in just 14 days. A jet airliner could do it in a few hours.

The balloon roughly followed in the air path of Columbus' third voyage to the new world; he too depended solely on wind.

The balloon had been out of radio touch with the world for the past week. The silence was broken by the Venezuelan announcement.

The ministry said the airport at Port of Spain, Trinidad, had radioed that the balloon was near the mouth of the Pedernales River in the Orinoco delta. Its position was given as about five miles from Trinidad.

The Venezuelan government dispatched a plane to the site. Later, a helicopter also was sent.

The balloon, 46 feet in diameter, began its aerial expedition Dec. 12.

It left the Canary Islands in hopes of being wafted by air currents across the Atlantic to Barbados, British West Indies, 3,000 miles away.

The expedition was headed by A. B. Eiloart, 51-year-old businessman.

He was accompanied by his son, Timothy, 21, radio telegraphist, Colin Mudie, 32, pilot, and Mudie's wife, Rosemary, 30, photographer, second pilot and cook.

Eiloart had estimated that the drift across the Atlantic would take anywhere from one to three weeks depending on the winds.

Forty-five tons of equipment and nearly 700 pounds of food were taken to the Canaries. The drift of the Small World was designed to probe wind currents across the Atlantic.

The Communications Ministry said the balloonists had communicated with the Canary Islands after landing. The Canaries, in turn, had flashed word to the Port of Spain airport.

Fears for the safety of the aerial voyagers arose after radio listeners had failed to pick up any signals from the balloon's radio for the past seven days.

The last reported position of the silver and black balloon had been about 250 miles south of the Canaries. That was Dec. 15 when a German freighter spotted the Small World.

The Canary Islands lie off northwest Africa. Tenerife, starting point of the expedition is 60 miles west of Cape Juby on the coast of Spanish Morocco.

The area of the Orinoco delta was first sighted by Christopher Columbus on his third voyage of discovery in 1498. It is nearly 300 miles southwest of the balloon's original target, Barbados, lying off the Windward Isles of the West Indies.

The Canary Island takeoff point was at about 28 degrees north latitude and the Orinoco delta is about 10, meaning that on the drift estimated at 3,300 miles to the Orinoco, they could have angled about 18 degrees southward, or 1,080 miles.

It was not the first Atlantic adventure for navigator Mudie. In 1952 he crossed the ocean to the U. S. Traffic Deaths Near 350, May Set New All-Time High

Tragic Yule Holiday Toll Rises Hourly

By UPI

American motorists appeared dead set Friday night on making a grim mockery of the Christmas holidays by setting an all-time record for deaths on the highways.

The traffic death rate had been setting a killing, record-breaking pace since the start of the long holiday at 6 p.m. Wednesday. There was no letup Friday night and, if it continued, the death count would pass the all-time, all-holiday mark of 712 deaths set during the four-day "Black Christmas" of 1956.

CALIFORNIA LEADS

"There is no justification for any optimism," a spokesman for the National Safety Council said. "It just looks horrible."

A United Press International count at 9 p.m. e.s.t. showed 332 deaths in traffic, 62 in fires, 3 in plane crashes, and 44 in miscellaneous accidents for a holiday total of 441.

California had the worst death record with 36 fatalities, followed by Texas with 28, New York state with 25, Pennsylvania with 19, Ohio with 17, North Carolina with 16, Illinois with 15, and Massachusetts and Michigan with 12 each.

Safety experts had only to look at the death charts for the 1956 and 1958 Christmas holidays to make a prediction of a record fatality count by the time this year's 102-hour week ends at midnight Sunday. On the average, the

French Halt Foreign Cash Banker Deals

PARIS (UPI) — The French government ordered a three-day halt in deals involving foreign currency Friday night in a move apparently confirming that the franc would be devalued.

The Finance Ministry issued the order to all French banks as Premier Charles de Gaulle met in an emergency meeting with his cabinet to put final touches on plans for a new "Gaullist" currency.

Despite mounting rumors during the past week, the government refused to confirm that devaluation was imminent. The official silence apparently was designed to stem possible speculative panic should the government's financial plans become known.

Sources close to the cabinet said however, that devaluation of the franc probably would be announced after the cabinet met again Saturday. The sources said devaluation would be one of a series of "spectacular measures affecting the finances, economy and investments inside France."

As an additional step to kill speculation, the Paris Stock Exchange remained closed Friday by a special government decree. The exchange and banks were closed Thursday for the holiday.

Unofficial predictions on the extent of devaluation ranged from 12 to about 20 per cent. This could bring the franc close to 500 to the dollar. The rate has been 420 to the dollar since the last devaluation in August, 1957.

De Gaulle, who takes over as president Jan. 8, drove from his country home 150 miles from Paris

Hospital Funds Are Requested

Formal application for federal Hill-Burton funds was recently made by the Ward 5 hospital commissioners, it was learned last night.

The move came shortly after West Ouachita Parish was designated as a new hospital district by the State Hospital Board.

Creation of the new district gave a top priority rating to the proposed hospital in its quest for federal aid.

Local representatives of the medical center project had earlier appeared before the board's advisory committee, seeking the funds, but formal application had not been made until recently.

Spokesmen last night indicated they expect to know "within the next month or two" whether or not the Ward 5 project will receive the aid.

However, even if the funds are to be granted, the aid will not be forthcoming before July, 1959, it was added.

Jurors Indict 3 In Murder Plot

VENTURA, Calif. (AP) — A grand jury murder indictment was returned Friday against Mrs. Elizabeth Duncan in the strangulation of her pregnant daughter-in-law. Also indicted for murder were two laborers who say Mrs. Duncan hired them to kill Olga Duncan, 30, a pretty surgical nurse.

The district attorney said Mrs. Duncan, 54, engineered the Nov. 17 killing because she was intensely jealous of the brunette nurse who had married her son, Attorney Frank Duncan, last June.

Exchange New Messages With U. S. Satellite

WASHINGTON (UPI) — America's 44-ton "talking" satellite exchanged four more messages Friday with Army ground stations, ending a vacation the Atlas missile was granted on Christmas Day.

The Defense Department said that on four successive passes across the United States, the giant satellite was "interrogated and tested successfully."

It marked the 35th time since the Atlas was shot aloft by the Air Force a week ago Thursday that the delicate outer space communications "brain" has been interrogated.

The Pentagon reported that thus far since President Eisenhower's Christmas message was broadcast to earth a week ago, the relay equipment has been loaded and unloaded with messages 29 times.

In Friday's tests, dispatchers at Corona, Calif., loaded the "talking" satellite and the message was unloaded at Fort Sam Houston, Texas. Another message was sent up to the satellite at San

AMONG HOUSE LIBERALS

Anti-Alford Drive Losing Its Steam

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A campaign by certain House liberals to block the seating of Dr. Dale Alford, the Little Rock segregationist who defeated Rep. Brooks Hays (D-Ark.) in the congressional elections, appeared Friday to be losing steam.

Some liberals who had been expected to support the anti-Alford drive were backing away from it. It seemed there might be a compromise which would permit Alford to take his seat while election complaints against him are disposed of quickly.

At the same time, however, a move to deny Alford recognition as a Democrat continued to attract strong support among northern and western Democrats. Such a move, if successful, would restrict Alford's chances of advancing to a position of power in House Committees.

This issue will be threshed out in a Democratic caucus the day before Congress convenes. Whatever the outcome then, some House member is virtually certain to rise on the floor on Jan. 7, the day Congress opens, and challenge Alford's right to a seat. But chances that Alford would hold his seat were improving.

Rep. Frank Thompson Jr. (D-N.J.), a key figure among Democratic House liberals, said he was not inclined to vote against seating Alford. Rep. Lee Metcalf (D-Mont.), another liberal leader, said he also would have to be shown why Alford was not entitled to be seated while charges against him are studied.

The challenge of Alford's right to a seat would be in line with a recommendation of a House committee which heard a Little Rock

Toll Set At 100 As Storms Hit Japanese Area

TOKYO, Saturday (UPI) — One hundred Japanese fishermen were missing and a believed drowned Friday in a series of ship sinkings in sudden Pacific storms that lashed the length of Japan.

The men were aboard 10 ships which were believed to have gone down in giant waves.

Greatest single disaster occurred off the coast of Fukushima Prefecture where seven boats, with 52 men aboard, were missing.

Thirty boats belonging to the Matsukawa and Harakama fisheries associations were struck by the storms, and all but seven made it to safety.

Debris from at least one boat already has been washed ashore.

There was little hope also for the 13 crew members of the 498-ton cargo ship Tenyu Maru No. 11 which capsized off Shiraiishi in Aichi Prefecture. The ship was only 150 feet offshore when it was rolled over by the waves.

It was feared that the entire crew was trapped inside the vessel with its cargo of automobiles and crude rubber.

The 61-ton fishing boat Yoshi Maru with 33 men aboard was missing off the Goto Islands in southern Japan's Nagasaki Prefecture.

Contact with the boat after it radioed that three men had been washed overboard by a wave, and that two had been rescued.

A small one-ton fishing boat, the Seigoro Maru, was overdue at Haneda, Chiba Prefecture, with two men aboard.

Local Officer, Airmen Face Hunt Charges

By SAM HANNA Staff Writer

St. Joseph—A Monroe policeman and six Lake Charles airmen have been arrested on charges of killing illegal deer in Madison Parish, while the greatest influx of hunters in Texas history swarmed into the Delta yesterday for Louisiana's first antlerless season.

Madison Parish Game Agent Jim Parker identified the Monroe policeman as 26-year-old Leo Earl, Filhiol ave.

Meanwhile, wild life officials, suffering headaches in the wake of hordes of doe killers, cautioned hunters to make reservations before coming to Texas where the antlerless season is underway.

In Madison Parish, where local officials refused to open an "any deer" season, Parker said the Monroe policeman was arrested by Game Agent Oran Lewis at 1:30 a.m. Dec. 23 with a doe deer in his automobile.

Three days prior, Game Agent Jesse Laird and Parker cracked down on the six Lake Charles airmen. Parker said the men had three doe deer in their possession. Ransoming in age from 19 to 43 the men were:

Jess N. Robinson, 43; his son, James R. Robinson, 19; William L. Hollingworth, 25; Stark K. Wayne, 28; Winfred R. Cassell, 20; and James T. Trease, 24.

Parker said the men were all stationed at the Lake Charles Air Force Base. The airmen and the Monroe policeman each were placed under $300 bond and are scheduled to appear in court at Tallulah Jan. 19, according to Parker. All of the arrests were made in Madison Parish.

While he was making the arrests public in Madison, State Enforcement Chief R. P. Easterly moved a staff of seven game wardens into Texas.

French Halt Foreign Cash Banker Deals

PARIS (UPI) — The French government ordered a three-day halt in deals involving foreign currency Friday night in a move apparently confirming that the franc would be devalued.

The Finance Ministry issued the order to all French banks as Premier Charles de Gaulle met in an emergency meeting with his cabinet to put final touches on plans for a new "Gaullist" currency.

Despite mounting rumors during the past week, the government refused to confirm that devaluation was imminent. The official silence apparently was designed to stem possible speculative panic should the government's financial plans become known.

Sources close to the cabinet said however, that devaluation of the franc probably would be announced after the cabinet met again Saturday. The sources said devaluation would be one of a series of "spectacular measures affecting the finances, economy and investments inside France."

As an additional step to kill speculation, the Paris Stock Exchange remained closed Friday by special government decree. The exchange and banks were closed Thursday for the holiday.

Unofficial predictions on the extent of devaluation ranged from 12 to about 20 per cent. This could bring the franc close to 500 to the dollar. The rate has been 420 to the dollar since the last devaluation in August, 1957.

Jurors Indict 3 In Murder Plot

VENTURA, Calif. (AP) — A grand jury murder indictment was returned Friday against Mrs. Elizabeth Duncan in the strangulation of her pregnant daughter-in-law. Also indicted for murder were two laborers who say Mrs. Duncan hired them to kill Olga Duncan, 30, a pretty surgical nurse.

Exchange New Messages With U.S. Satellite

WASHINGTON (UPI) — America's 4½-ton "talking" satellite exchanged four more messages Friday with Army ground stations, ending a vacation the Atlas missile was granted on Christmas Day.

The Defense Department said that on four successive passes across the United States, the giant satellite was "interrogated and tested successfully."

It marked the 35th time since the Atlas was shot aloft by the Air Force a week ago Thursday that the delicate outer space communications "brain" has been interrogated.

The Pentagon reported that thus far since President Eisenhower's Christmas message was broadcast to earth a week ago, the relay equipment has been loaded and unloaded with messages 29 times.

In Friday's tests, dispatchers at Corona, Calif., loaded the "talking" satellite and the message was unloaded at Fort Sam Houston, Texas. Another message was sent up to the satellite at San (Continued On Page 5)

WITNESSES

Duncan, one of 15 witnesses who testified before the grand jury, had told newsmen earlier: "I find it fantastic to believe that my mother is involved. She would have to be insane to be involved in this."

Last Sunday, Augustine Baldonado led authorities to the lonely grave containing the battered body of the young nurse. He told investigators Mrs. Duncan had offered him and 22-year-old Luis Moya $6,000 to kill her daughter-in-law.

Moya had denied any connection with the crime, but then admitted it Christmas night.

"It feels good to get it off my chest," said Moya after telling investigators what they said was substantially the same story as Baldonado's.

Mrs. Duncan, held without bail, has denied any knowledge of a plot against her daughter-in-law.

Anti-Alford Drive Losing Its Steam

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A campaign by certain House liberals to block the seating of Dr. Dale Alford, the Little Rock segregationist who defeated Rep. Brooks Hays (D-Ark.) in the congressional elections, appeared Friday to be losing steam.

Some liberals who had been expected to support the anti-Alford drive were backing away from it. It seemed there might be a compromise which would permit Alford to take his seat while election complaints against him are disposed of quickly.

At the same time, however, a move to deny Alford recognition as a Democrat continued to attract strong support among northern and western Democrats. Such a move, if successful, would restrict Alford's chances of advancing to a position of power in House Committees.

This issue will be threshed out in a Democratic caucus the day before Congress convenes.

Whatever the outcome then, some House member is virtually certain to rise on the floor on Jan. 7, the day Congress opens, and challenge Alford's right to a seat. But chances that Alford would hold his seat were improving.

Rep. Frank Thompson Jr. (D-N.J.), a key figure among Democratic House liberals, said he was not now inclined to vote against seating Alford. Rep. Lee Metcalf (D-Mont.), another liberal leader, said he also would have to be shown why Alford was not entitled to be seated while charges against him are studied.

Tragic Yule Holiday Toll Rises Hourly

By UPI
American motorists appeared dead set Friday night on making a grim mockery of the Christmas holidays by setting an all-time record for deaths on the highways.

The traffic death rate had been setting a killing, record - breaking pace since the start of the long holiday at 6 p.m. Wednesday. There was no letup Friday night and, if it continued, the death count would pass the all-time, all-holiday mark of 712 deaths set during the four-day "Black Christmas" of 1956.

CALIFORNIA LEADS

"There is no justification for any optimism," a spokesman for the National Safety Council said. "It just looks horrible."

A United Press International count at 9 p.m. e.s.t. showed 332 deaths in traffic, 62 in fires, 3 in plane crashes, and 44 in miscellaneous accidents for a holiday total of 441.

California had the worst death record with 36 fatalities, followed by Texas with 28, New York state with 25, Pennsylvania with 19, Ohio with 17, North Carolina with 16, Illinois with 15, and Massachusetts and Michigan with 12 each.

Safety experts had only to look at the death charts for the 1956 and 1957 Christmas holidays to make a prediction of a record fatality count by the time this year's 102-hour week ends at midnight Sunday. On the average, the (Continued On Page 5)

Toll Set At 100 As Storms Hit Japanese Area

TOKYO, Saturday (UPI) — One hundred Japanese fishermen were missing and believed drowned Friday in a series of ship sinkings in sudden Pacific storms that lashed the length of Japan.

The men were aboard 10 ships which were believed to have gone down in giant waves.

Greatest single disaster occurred off the coast of Fukushima Prefecture where seven boats, with 52 men aboard, were missing.

Thirty boats belonging to the Matsukawa and Harakama fisheries associations were struck by the storms, and all but seven made it to safety.

Debris from at least one boat already has been washed ashore.

There was little hope also for the 13 crew members of the 493-ton cargo ship Tenyu Maru No. 11 which capsized off Shiraiishi in Aichi Prefecture. The ship was only 150 feet offshore when it was rolled over by the waves.

It was feared that the entire crew was trapped inside the vessel with its cargo of automobiles and crude rubber.

The 61-ton fishing boat Yoshi Maru with 33 men aboard was missing off the Goto Islands in southern Japan's Nagasaki Prefecture. Maritime officials lost contact with the boat after it radioed that three men had been washed overboard by a wave, and that two had been rescued.

A small one-ton fishing boat, the Seigoro Maru, was overdue at Haneda, Chiba Prefecture, with two men aboard.

Many Churches At Crossroads

By GEORGE W. CORNELL, Associated Press Religion Writer

Plain folks worship today in vernal observances. They saw a new face among the 1,200 members.

That's the revolution that has transformed one of the nation's historic, old parishes. Grace Church of New York, and it symbolizes the change, the church's boldness in a process new inclusiveness is a step forward that has strengthened a shattered ward in Christian character.

Class barriers, he says, "have no relation to what we're supposed to believe. After all, Jesus was born in a manger. But it has Dr. Louis W. Pitt, Grace's rector who has met the change in stride.

The problem, widespread in swelling U.S. cities, is that of the poor and down-town churches, abandoned by their fashionable flocks in flight to the suburbs and enveloped by commerce and working class apartment dwellers.

When this happens, the stately, tradition-laden houses of God either waste away into shells, or rigorously revise their strategy.

"Scores of churches across the land are now at, or are approaching such critical crossroads," says the Rev. Dr. Meryl H. Ruess, executive director of the Urban Church Department of the National Council of Churches.

"They will either hold back, clinging to old ways and go by default, leaving churchless suburbs in our cities, or else move into new frontiers of service."

At Grace, one of the country's storied, early churches which this month celebrated its 150th anniversary, the shift has been pointed up to an extremely vivid degree.

Once the ultra, smart-set church of the city, graced by wealthy homes and patronized by what was called the "creme de la creme" of high society, it stands now in a hazy, puzzle-like Manhattan district near the head of the Bowery.

To readjust to the altered neighborhood has taken some strenuous unbending, and the job of working out the stiffness still is in progress.

"It was a little difficult at first," Dr. Pitt says. "But we've made it over the most violent hurdles. The democratic pattern now is a 20-20 operation here."

Common people, white and colored, now kneel in the vaulted, columned sanctuary at 10th and Broadway, once the exclusive preserve of the well-to-do. Children, once restricted to the nursery, now lend an occasional counterpoint to the organ, and tag with their parents to the altar.

"The change has been like moving out of the Victorian era into the 20th century—a new, entirely different approach," Dr. Pitt says.

A few long-time members still cling to the church, and the transition has been jolting to some. But they've ridden it out, and put

Funeral Service Is Slated For Mrs. Schubert

Final rites will be conducted at 10:30 a.m. Saturday for Mrs. Marie Schubert, 85-year-old Monroe resident.

The Rev. Ben Oliphant will officiate at the services, to be conducted in the Mulhearn Funeral Home Chapel. Burial will be in a Monroe Cemetery.

A native of Vienna, Austria, Mrs. Schubert had lived here about 10 years. She died early Friday in St. Joseph's Home after a long illness.

She is survived by one son, Walter Schubert, Houston, Tex., a brother, C. R. Kurka, Jacksonville, Fla., and three grandchildren.

BEST FOR CROSSBREEDING — The Charolaise bull, shown here with LSU animal industry researchers, has been found to be the best bull for crossbreeding in regard to growth, weight and meat quality.

LSU's five-year research program was conducted to determine which crossbreeds yield the most meat and money for Louisiana cattlemen. Heaviest calves came from breeding the Charolaise bull with Brangus or Brahman cattle.

PRAYS IN CELLBLOCKS

Pope Brings Hope To Rome Prisoners

ROME (UPI)—Pope John XXIII brought the Christmas gift of faith and hope to Rome's biggest prison Friday. Murderers and thieves wept as he prayed in the cellblocks.

The virtually unprecedented visit turned grim Regina Coeli, Queen of Heaven prison for a few moments into a cathedral.

The Pope in his robes of office sat before a hastily built altar in the rotunda of the stone and steel jail, the cells rising in tiers around him.

The Pontiff's voice was filled with emotion as he saw the 1,300 prisoners, most of them awaiting trial, clutching the bars of the cells.

"We must carry out all the deeds of mercy," the Pope said. "They are 14, and assisting prisoners is one of them." He then referred to the fact that Thursday, he had visited two hospitals as part of his pastoral duties.

He made an attempt to lecture the prisoners. Rather, he recalled that a member of his own family once had a brush with the law.

"One of my good relatives, a young man, had gone hunting without a license," he said, "had been caught and taken away by the carabinieri (federal police)."

"He remained inside (jail) for one month. What an impression I had!"

"It was the first time I had seen the carabinieri carry out their job of making the law obeyed and how my little mind started working."

A group of prisoner-trustees, in pajama-style uniforms of brown and gray, stood by the Pope with heads bowed as he spoke from a makeshift throne.

The smell of flowers almost, but not quite, masked the sour odor of the prison which had been specially washed down for the first visit by a Pope since the mid-19th Century.

When the Pope entered the building, the prisoners cheered. "Viva il Papa!"—long live the Pope. They knelt for his blessing as he walked down barred corridors to the central rotunda.

He gently waved a censer which wafted fumes of incense through the bleak building.

"You life is ugly incense, because you have lost all taste of life," he said.

"Rest assured that this visit will remain deeply impressed on my soul. It is good that the new year, or let us call it the first year of our pontificate, be marked by a deed of mercy."

West Drafts Proposal On Soviet Meet

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Western Big Three countries have virtually completed drafting notes to the Soviet Union offering to discuss the entire German problem at a new conference.

But the Allies will reject any thought of limiting talks to Berlin's future, despite Soviet threats to turn their sector over to Communist-controlled East Germany within six months after last Thanksgiving Day.

Officials who reported this Friday said the Western notes will be delivered within a few days, probably before New Year's Day.

The West German government is reported ready to send along its formal reply to the Soviet threats about the same time.

Diplomats informants reported the notes would be parallel but not identical. All will stand firm, they said, on the Western determination to remain in Berlin.

The Big Three offer to talk will be in the nature of a reprieve to the Soviets that they have not yet replied to a Sept. 30 Allied proposal for a four-power conference on Germany.

At that time, the United States, Britain and France—in a move to speed preparations for a summit conference—offered to discuss the German problem at a separate four-power meeting.

The new Western notes are understood to reaffirm this readiness to talk. No date is suggested, however.

The notes are reported deliberately phrased to give the Soviet Union a face-saving opportunity to back away from what has been viewed as a six-month Soviet ultimatum on Berlin.

The Western attitude will be, authorities said, that the three allies are sure the Soviets do not mean their Berlin note of Nov. 27 to be an ultimatum.

None of the wartime allies, it will be argued, can single-handedly renounce the arrangements for joint occupation of Berlin.

Any modification of these arrangements, the notes will say, could come only from new agreements all four countries may decide upon jointly.

Search Party Finds Hunter Lost In Brake

Members of a search party that worked about four hours last night found a 26-year-old West Monroe car in Cheniere Brake just below Middle Lake where he became lost while duck hunting.

The man, Walter C. Hoy Jr., of 102 Ellis St., was unharmed when found about 10:15 p.m. by Don Martin and L. E. Artant.

Both men were part of a search party of some 50 neighbors and relatives of Hoy.

Ouachita Parish deputies and the American Legion rescue unit manned by Monroe firemen joined the hunt about 9:30 p.m.

Monroe Caples, Hoy's uncle, said that Hoy left to go duck hunting about 4 p.m. and that the search party was organized about 6 p.m.

Caples said that Arrant and Martin walked to Hoy who answered searcher's calls. They found him on Jackson's Branch at the lower end of Middle Lake, Caples explained.

Caples said that searchers did not fear that Hoy had met with drowning although he was in a boat.

"We just figured he was lost somewhere in the brake," Caples said.

Rains, Snow Prevail For Some Areas

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Thunder on the plains and rains in Florida and California marked Friday's weather.

Water maintained a little negligent pressure in the North, with snow flurries in New England and chill air down the East Coast despite fair skies.

There was a little snow mixed with a rainy pattern from the northern Pacific coast inland across the plateau to the Montana mountains.

But 40-degree temperatures saluted into the Upper Mississippi Valley on mild south winds. An eastward movement of this invasion was expected to warm the mid-Atlantic coast Saturday.

A crackling thunderstorm drenched Hutchinson, Kan., Friday, and there were a number of showers over the Kansas-Oklahoma border region.

The rainy weather was intensifying over Florida and adjacent southeastern states, thwarting vacationing sun-seekers, and a wide expanse of cloudiness began moving into the Ohio Valley.

In the West, rain spread from the northern coastal areas southward and inland through California. It was expected to sprinkle the dry Bakersfield area Saturday.

The only influx of cold air, apparently not extreme for the season, came south from the Canadian Rockies and fanned into the Northwest.

A survey showed that the heaviest use of the family car is for shopping. At least 98 per cent of those we polled said they used the car mainly for going to the store.

PARTY ENDS IN TRAGEDY

Five Of Family Perish In Fire

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — The three-story mansion of a Richmond industrialist, scene of a gay Christmas party, became a flaming death trap for five members of the family Friday.

The only survivor was a serviceman son home on Christmas leave. He and a group of friends had left the $150,000-house for a restaurant shortly before the fire was discovered.

Firemen searching the smoking ruins recovered the bodies of Horace A. Gray Jr., 49; his wife, Catherine, 47; and their children, Thomas, 17; Foster, 13; and Susan Lee, 19.

Officials said the children apparently had made frantic efforts to rouse their parents before they, too, died in the 15-room overlooking the James River.

The surviving son Horace A. Gray III, 22, identified the bodies. He had been at a police station arranging bail for two friends arrested for being drunk and disorderly in the restaurant when he heard his family's address broadcast over the police radio.

Evidence of the happy Christmas celebration remained. There was an unopened package. In the dining room, the silver, china and crystal were left from the Christmas meal.

Fire Chief L. M. Bowman said after an inspection the blaze apparently began in some overstuffed furniture in a downstairs library. He said what touched it off was a mystery, but it may have been a smoldering cigarette.

Mrs. Gray sounded the first alarm at 1:48 a.m. She called the fire department, apparently from a bedside telephone, gave the street address, and said in a frantic voice: "We are suffocating to death."

A door was kicked open by L. Jeff Pemberton, one of the first firemen on the scene. He said he met by a mass of flames.

"Nobody could have been alive in there," he said.

Gray's body, clad in nightclothes, was slumped over a bed. The youngest son's body, also in night clothes, was discovered in an alcove window at the front of the house.

Mrs. Gray's body was lying across her bed and the bodies of Thomas and Susan Lee were discovered at a window at the rear of the home.

All but Thomas, who was clad in trousers and shoes, still wore their night clothing.

The three children apparently had tried to awaken their parents, fire officials said. Their bodies were 30 or 40 feet from their bedrooms.

Former Mental Patient Held As Arson Suspect

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—A former mental patient Friday apparently set fire that caused $3,000 damage to his sister's residence, police said.

Otis H. Dumas, 52, was held for investigation of arson.

A passing motorist, 56-year-old Harold Dragon, told police he overpowered and held Dumas after seeing him prepare to put a burning match to a pile of crumpled newspapers by the wall.

A woman ran from the building, he said, and spread a fire warning.

Miss Clara Ruby Dumas, the sister, said her brother formerly was a mental patient at East Louisiana State Hospital in Jackson.

Neighbors said the two quarreled and the sister left. When she returned the apartment was ablaze.

Trading In U.S. Bonds Is Light

NEW YORK (AP)—U.S. government bonds closed firm in extremely slow post-holiday trading Friday.

There was no trading in corporate bonds as the New York Stock Exchange was closed for the day.

Market experts said Friday's firmness, together with gains in Tuesday and Wednesday, was due in part to a "technical correction" after a general slide in prices over the previous two weeks plus the fact that President Eisenhower is planning a balanced budget for fiscal 1960.

Ninety per cent of the U.S. date crop is produced in the Coachella Valley of southern California.

Many Churches At Crossroads

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
Associated Press Religion Writer

Plain folks worship today in pews once reserved for the social elite.

That's the revolution that has transformed one of the nation's historic, old parishes, Grace Church of New York, and it symbolizes dramatically a process that has strengthened or shattered countless churches across the country.

"It's the new missionary challenge in America," says the Rev. Dr. Louis W. Pitt, Grace's doughty but diplomatic rector who has met the change in stride.

"Scores of churches across the land are now at, or are approaching, such critical crossroads," says the Rev. Dr. Meryl H. Ruess, executive director of the Urban Church Department of the National Council of Churches.

"They will either hold back, clinging to old ways and go by default, leaving churchless suburbs in our cities, or else move into new frontiers of service."

At Grace, one of the country's storied, early churches which this month celebrated its 150th anniversary, the shift has been pointed up to an extremely vivid degree.

Once the ultra, smart-set church of the city, ringed by wealthy homes and patronized by what was called the "creme de la creme" of high society, it stands now in a higgledy-piggledy Manhattan district near the head of the Bowery.

To readjust to the altered neighborhood has taken some strenuous unbending, and the job of working out the stiffness still is in progress.

"It was a little difficult at first," Dr. Pitt says. "But we've made it over the most violent hurdles. The democratic pattern now is a going operation here."

Common people, white and colored, now kneel in the vaulted, columned sanctuary at 10th and Broadway, once the exclusive preserve of the well-to-do. Children, once restricted to the nursery, now lend an occasional counterpoint to the organ, and tag with their parents to the altar.

"The change has been like moving out of the Victorian era into the 20th century—to an entirely different approach," Dr. Pitt says.

A few long-time members still stick to the church, and the transition has been jolting to some. But they've ridden it out, and put their efforts into the new venture. Others came back for the anniversary observances. They saw a lot of new faces among the 1,200 members.

To Dr. Pitt, whose combined urbane and down-to-earth qualities have made him an able mediator of the change, the church's new inclusiveness "is a step forward in Christian character."

Class barriers, he says, "have no relation to what we're supposed to believe. After all, Jesus was born in a manger. But it has taken circumstances to bring us closer to a more realistic expression of His teachings."

When Dr. Pitt, a veteran of 40 years in the Episcopal ministry, first came to Grace 13 years ago, the parish maintained a separate chapel on the lower East Side for poorer worshippers, with only the elect using the church itself.

But amid rumblings, he changed all that, "and we're all settled very comfortably here now."

While many Episcopal clergymen were wary of Bishops Graham's New York crusade, Dr. Pitt joined its leadership as a means of reaching the city's vast unchurched.

On Saturday nights, Grace now holds sessions for alcoholics. It has weekly Bible study meetings, and occasional dinners for derelicts off the street. Its day school is interracial.

Services are followed by social hours to meet visitors, and its teams are assigned to make follow-up visits and extend invitations.

Two energetic young ministers, the Rev. Michael Allen and the Rev. Stephen Michlund, have been added to the staff in the last two years, and drawn in numerous young members, including couples and youths from nearby Greenwich Village.

The old church, whose soaring Gothic steeple and arched ceilings have brought it citations as one of the city's most treasured architectural masterpieces, is now looking out at its people—instead of up at its aged spire.

"We can't live off tradition," Dr. Pitt says, "and do our work in the world."

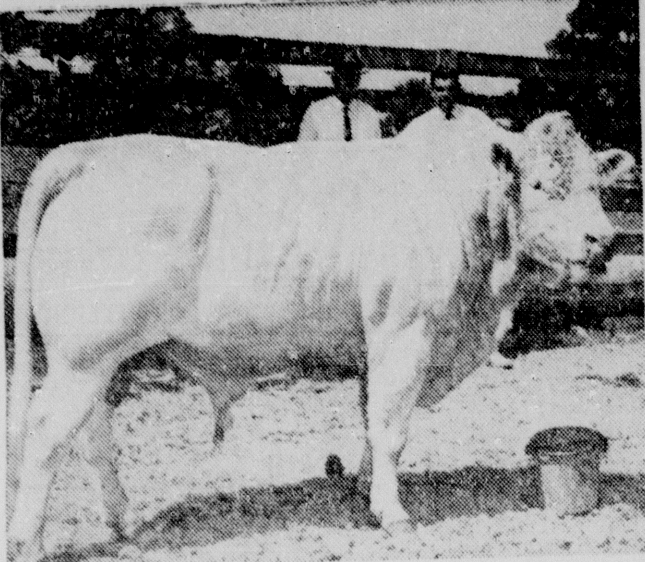

Funeral Service Is Slated For Mrs. Schubert

Final rites will be conducted at 10:30 a.m. Saturday for Mrs. Marie Schubert, 85-year-old Monroe resident.

The Rev. Ben Oliphant will officiate at the services, to be conducted in the Mulhearn Funeral Home Chapel. Burial will be in a Monroe Cemetery.

A native of Vienna, Austria, Mrs. Schubert had lived here about 10 years. She died early Friday in St. Joseph's Home after a long illness.

She is survived by one son, Walter Schubert, Houston, Tex.; a brother, C. R. Kurka, Jacksonville, Fla.; and three grandchildren.

BEST FOR CROSSBREEDING — The Charolaise bull, shown here with LSU animal industry researchers, has been found to be the best bull for crossbreeding in regard to growth, weight and meat quality. LSU's five-year research program was conducted to determine which crossbreeds yield the most meat and money for Louisiana cattlemen. Heaviest calves came from breeding the Charolaise bull with Brangus or Brahman, cattle.

PRAYS IN CELLBLOCKS

Pope Brings Hope To Rome Prisoners

ROME (UPI)—Pope John XXIII brought the Christmas gift of faith and hope to Rome's biggest prison Friday. Murderers and thieves wept as he prayed in the cellblocks.

The virtually unprecedented visit turned Queen Regina Coeli (Queen of Heaven) prison for a few moments into a cathedral.

The Pope in his robes of office sat before a hastily built altar in the rotunda of the stone and steel jail, the cells rising in tiers around him.

The Pontiff's voice was filled with emotion as he saw the 1,300 prisoners, most of them awaiting trial, clutching the bars of the cells.

"We must carry out all the deeds of mercy," the Pope said. "They are 14, and assisting prisoners are one of them." He then referred to the fact that Thursday, he had visited two hospitals as part of his pastoral duties.

He made no attempt to lecture the prisoners. Rather, he recalled that a member of his own family once had a brush with the law.

"One of my good relatives, a young man, had gone hunting without a license," he said, "had been caught and taken away by the carabinieri (federal police)." "He remained inside (jail) for one month. What an impression I had!"

"It was the first time I had seen the carabinieri carry out their job of making the law obeyed and how my little mind started working."

A group of prisoner-trustees, in pajama-style uniforms of brown and gray, stood by the Pope with heads bowed as he spoke from a makeshift throne.

The smell of flowers almost, but not quite, masked the sour odor of the prison which had been specially washed down for the first visit by a Pope since the mid-19th century.

When the Pope entered the building, the prisoners cheered: "Viva il Papa!"—long live the Pope. They knelt for his blessing as he walked down barred corridors to the central rotunda.

He gently waved a censer which wafted fumes of incense through the bleak building.

"You life is ugly incense, because you have lost all taste of life," he said.

"Rest assured that this visit will remain deeply impressed on my soul. It is good that the new year, or let us call it the first year of our pontificate, be marked by a deed of mercy."

NEW YORK (AP) — A last-minute shopping surge pushed this year's Christmas retail trade to a new record, Dun & Bradstreet said Friday.

Top favorites of Christmas shoppers were women's fashion accessories, men's furnishings, traditional gifts, toys, glassware, and holiday food specialties. Women's sportswear, dresses, lingerie and cosmetics sold in far greater volume than last year and merchants reported a moderate rise for women's furs and coats.

Total dollar volume of retail trade for the week ended Wednesday was estimated by Dun & Bradstreet at unchanged to 4 percent higher than a year ago. Percentage changes in major areas: east north central, east south central and Rocky Mountain up 1 to 5; west north central unchanged to 4; mid-Atlantic, south Atlantic, west south central and Pacific coast off 1 to up 3; and New England off 2 to up 2.

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—A former mental patient Friday apparently set fire that caused $3,000 damage to his sister's residence, police said.

Otis H. Dumas, 52, was held for investigation of arson.

A passing motorist, 56-year-old Harold Dragon, told police he overpowered and held Dumas after seeing him prepare to put a burning match to a pile of crumpled newspapers by the wall. A woman ran from the building, he said, and spread a fire warning.

Miss Clara Ruby Dumas, the sister, said her brother formerly was a mental patient at East Louisiana State Hospital in Jackson. Neighbors said the two quarreled and the sister left. When she returned the apartment was ablaze.

Trading In U.S. Bonds Is Light

NEW YORK (AP)—U.S. government bonds closed firm in extremely slow post-holiday trading Friday.

There was no trading in corporate bonds as the New York Stock Exchange was closed for the day. Market experts said Friday's firmness, together with gains Tuesday and Wednesday, was due in part to a "technical correction" after a general slide in prices over the previous two weeks plus the fact that President Eisenhower is planning a balanced budget for fiscal 1960.

Ninety per cent of the U.S. date crop is produced in the Coachella Valley of southern California.

West Drafts Proposal On Soviet Meet

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Western Big Three countries have virtually completed drafting notes to the Soviet Union offering to discuss the entire German problem at a new conference.

But the Allies will reject any thought of limiting talks to Berlin's future, despite Soviet threats to turn their sector over to Communist-controlled East Germany within six months after last Thanksgiving Day.

Officials who reported this Friday said the Western notes will be delivered within a few days, probably before New Year's Day.

The West German government is reported ready to send along its formal reply to the Soviet threats about the same time.

Diplomats informants reported the notes would be parallel but not identical. All will stand firm, they said, on the Western determination to remain in Berlin.

The Big Three offer to talk will be in the nature of a reminder to the Soviets that they have not yet replied to a Sept. 30 Allied proposal for a four-power conference on Germany.

At that time, the United States, Britain and France—in a move to speed preparations for a summit conference—offered to discuss the German problem at a separate four-power meeting.

The new Western notes are understood to reaffirm this readiness to talk. No date is suggested, however.

The notes are reported deliberately phrased to give the Soviet Union a face-saving opportunity to back away from what has been viewed as a six-month Soviet ultimatum on Berlin.

The Western attitude will be, the Allies said, that the three allies are sure the Soviets did not mean their Berlin note of Nov. 27 to be an ultimatum.

None of the wartime allies, it will be argued, can single-handedly renounce the arrangements for joint occupation of Berlin.

Any modification of these arrangements, the notes will say, could come only from new agreements all four countries may decide upon jointly.

Search Party Finds Hunter Lost In Brake

Members of a search party that worked about four hours last night found a 26-year-old West Monroviaer deep in Cheniere Lake where he became lost while duck hunting.

The man, Walter C. Hoy Jr., of 102 Ellis St., was unharmed when found about 10:15 p.m. by Don Martin and L. E. Arrant.

Both men were part of a search party of some 50 neighbors and relatives of Hoy.

Ouachita Parish deputies and the American Legion rescue unit manned by Monroe firemen joined the hunt about 9:30.

Monroe Caples, Hoy's uncle, said that Hoy left to go duck hunting about 4 p.m. and that the search party was organized about 6 p.m.

Caples said that Arrant and Martin walked to Hoy who answered searcher's calls. They found him on Jackson's Branch at the lower end of Middle Lake, Caples explained.

Caples said that searchers did not fear that Hoy had met with drowning although he was in a boat.

"We just figured he was lost somewhere in the brake," Caples said.

Rains, Snow Prevail For Some Areas

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Thunder on the plains and rains in Florida and California marked Friday's weather.

Winter maintained a little negligent pressure in the North, with snow flurries in New England and chill air down the East Coast despite fair skies.

There was a little snow mixed with a rainy pattern from the northern Pacific coast inland across the plateau to the Montana mountains.

But 40-degree temperatures sallied into the Upper Mississippi Valley on mild south winds. An eastward movement of this invasion was expected to warm the mid-Atlantic coast Saturday.

A crackling thunderstorm drenched Hutchinson, Kan., Friday, and there were a number of showers over the Kansas-Oklahoma border region.

The rainy weather was extending over Florida and adjacent southeastern states, thwarting vacationing sun-seekers, and a wide expanse of cloudiness began moving into the Ohio Valley.

In the West, rain spread from the northern coastal areas southward and inland through California. It was expected to sprinkle the dry Bakersfield area Saturday.

The only influx of cold air, apparently "not extreme for the season, came south from the Canadian Rockies and fanned into the Northwest.

A survey showed that the heaviest use of the family car is for shopping. At least 98 per cent of those we polled said they used the car mainly for going to the store.

PARTY ENDS IN TRAGEDY

Five Of Family Perish In Fire

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — The three-story mansion of a Richmond industrialist, scene of a gay Christmas party, became a flaming death trap for five members of the family Friday.

The only survivor was a serviceman son home on Christmas leave. He and a group of friends had left the $150,000-house for a restaurant shortly before the fire was discovered.

Firemen searching the smoking ruins recovered the bodies of Horace A. Gray Jr., 49; his wife, Catherine, 47; and their children, Thomas, 17; Foster, 13; and Susan Lee, 19.

Officials said the children apparently had made frantic efforts to rouse their parents before they, too, died in the 15-room overlooking the James River.

The surviving son Horace A. Gray III, 22, identified the bodies. He had been at a police station arranging bail for two friends arrested for being drunk and disorderly in the restaurant when he heard his family's address broadcast over the police radio.

Evidence of the happy Christmas celebration remained. There was an unopened package. In the dining room, the silver, china and crystal were left from the Christmas meal.

Fire Chief L. M. Blazman said after an inspection the blaze apparently began in some overstuffed furniture in a downstairs library. He said what touched it off was a mystery, but it may have been a smoldering cigarette.

Mrs. Gray sounded the first alarm at 1:43 a.m. She called the fire department, apparently from a bedside telephone, gave the street address, and said in a frantic voice: "We are suffocating to death."

A door was kicked open by Lt. Jeff Pemberton, one of the first firemen on the scene. He said he was met by a mass of flames. "Nobody could have been alive in there," he said.

Gray's body, clad in nightclothes was slumped over a bed. The Robert Collins, 24-year-old Negro of Crystal Springs, was killed when her car hit a telephone pole 16 miles southwest of Jackson Christmas morning.

Jimmy Wayne Roberts, 20, was killed in a wreck 15 miles north of Fulton on Christmas. His car overturned on a country road.

Alex Owens, 45, was killed north of Marks Christmas morning when a car and a truck collided.

Frankie Spearman, 50, and Franklin Mosley, 67, were burned to death Christmas Eve as fire swept their Tupelo home. They were identified as Negroes.

Candidates Qualify

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — New Orleans City councilman Henry B. Curtis has become the third candidate to file for the Feb. 21 Democratic primary for the election of a civil district judge. The vacancy on the civil bench was created when Walter B. Hamlin was elected in November to the Louisiana Supreme Court. Other candidates include State Sen. Daniel A. McGovern and Judge Vets Levy.

youngest son's body, also in night clothes, was discovered in an alcove window at the front of the house.

Mrs. Gray's body was lying across her bed and the bodies of Thomas and Susan Lee were discovered at a window at the rear of the home.

All but Thomas, who was clad in trousers and shoes, still wore their night clothing.

The three children apparently had tried to awaken their parents, fire officials said. Their bodies were 30 or 40 feet from their bedrooms.

YULE THIEVES LOOT BANK

Nine Safe Deposit Boxes Are Stolen

LOUIN, Miss. (AP) — Burglars took advantage of the Christmas Bank and stole nine safe deposit boxes and $2,729.91 in cash, bank officials said Friday.

Mrs. Arlin Wall, cashier, said the burglars failed to open the main vault where $20,000 in cash was stored.

Original estimates of the loot had ranged as high as $23,000. Investigation of the burglary was delayed several hours when FBI agent Robert E. Lee of Laurel became involved in an automobile accident near Bay Springs as he hastened to Louin. Lee was released after treatment for minor injuries and arrived at the bank about noon.

Mrs. Wall discovered the burglary when she opened the bank at 8:30 Friday morning. She found the rear door ripped open and blinds drawn across the front door and windows. Inside, papers, empty money sacks and other bank items littered the floor.

She said burglars apparently worked leisurely, using a torch to open the outside vault where the safe deposit boxes were stored.

Their attack upon the door to the main vault damaged the lock and made difficult its opening.

The bank is operated by three women in a two-story building in the heart of this small Jasper County town. The bank has been

Policemen End Freedom Spree Of Safecracker

ABERDEEN, Scotland (UPI) — Two policemen Friday quietly ended the Christmas "freedom" holiday of escaped convict Johnny Ramensky, the ex-commando and expert safecracker who broke out of prison last week for the third time this year.

They arrested Ramensky near here, 40 miles from Peterhead Prison from which he made a break Dec. 17. The policemen acted on a tip from a bus driver that a man who looked like Ramensky was walking along a road near Aberdeen.

Ramensky, 53, who was a hero during World War II, has spent 31 years in prison. He made his latest break so smoothly that prison officials believed for days he still was somewhere within the prison walls, perhaps in the sewer system.

Ramensky was released from a term he was serving during the war so that his ability to elude guards and crack safes could be used to obtain enemy documents. The British army parachuted him into Italy and Germany in a series of daring raids to open official safes and bring out important papers. After the war, he returned to his usual civilian occupation and soon was back in prison.

Flaming Crash Of Plane Fatal For 3 Persons

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — A whirlwind hurled a French DC8 airliner with 70 persons aboard to the ground in a flaming crash here Friday. Three passengers were killed.

A heroic steward helped get the other 60 passengers to safety. The seven-member crew also walked away from the blazing wreckage. Only minor injuries were reported. The unidentified steward suffered burns.

Authorities said all of the passengers on the UAT Lines flight from Johannesburg, South Africa, to London were South Africans.

The plane took off into a blinding African thunderstorm that turned the sky black. Thirty seconds later it crashed and burned.

The pilot told the Paris office of UAT by telephone that he had been given permission to take off despite the storm. He said that half a minute after he was airborne, a "terrific whirlwind" clutched the plane and flung it like a chip to the ground.

Tests made by ornithologists indicate that migrating birds can navigate by the stars.

STARTS IN KITCHEN

Rural Home Fire Is Fatal For Nine

AUBURN, Wash. (AP) — A fire that seemed to explode from the kitchen of a large rural home killed nine members of a farm family Friday.

The blaze, starting at 6 a.m., destroyed the Ole Hollenbach home, four miles east of this western Washington town.

The description of the fire's explosive spread was given by firemen by Hollenbach, one of three survivors, before he was taken to a hospital for treatment of burns.

Hollenbach, 42, said he went to get a fire extinguisher on a porch but was unable to re-enter the house as the kitchen burst into flames.

Dead were Mrs. Hollenbach, 38, and eight Hollenbach children. They were Gale, 18; Donald, 17; Gary, 16; Sharon, 15; Patricia, 13; Mary Allyn, 8; Carl, 6; and Penny, 4.

The two survivors besides Hollenbach were another daughter, Wanda, 7, and Phoebe Hightower, 80, who is Mrs. Hollenbach's mother.

Wanda crawled from a window to a roof of the two-story frame house. A neighbor, Willard Clyde, got her down with a ladder. She suffered serious burns.

Mrs. Hightower was believed to have jumped to safety from a second-story window.

Clyde said barking of his dog called his attention to the blaze. Hollenbach told firemen he believed the fire started from a short circuit in a cord leading to an electric clock in the kitchen.

Another Hollenbach son, Dale, 19, and his wife, who live nearby, arrived as firemen dug into the ruins for bodies. Five bodies were found quickly; the other four were recovered within a few hours.

Rebel leader Ernesto "Che" Guevara, Argentine-born physician and one of Castro's chief lieutenants, declared in a broadcast on the rebel radio that Santa Clara was "surrounded on four sides" by forces of both Castro's "July 26th revolutionary movement" and of the "revolutionary directorate."

Guevara said he was broadcasting from the "headquarters of the rebel army" in Sancti Spiritus, another important city of Las Villas province, which the rebels announced they had captured Thursday.

Santa Clara, one of Cuba's four largest cities, is only six hours drive from Havana on Cuba's arterial central highway.

The rebel radio also claimed capture of the port of Caibarien on the north coast of Las Villas. It said the important Cuban navy base and sugar port of Cienfuegos on the south coast was "besieged."

YULE THIEVES LOOT BANK

Nine Safe Deposit Boxes Are Stolen

LOUIN, Miss. (AP) — Burglars took advantage of the Christmas holiday to break into the Peoples Bank and stole nine safe deposit boxes and $2,729.91 in cash, bank officials said Friday.

Mrs. Arlin Wall, cashier, said the burglars failed to open the main vault where $20,000 in cash was stored.

Original estimates of the loot had ranged as high as $23,000. Investigation of the burglary was delayed several hours when FBI agent Robert E. Lee of Laurel became involved in an automobile accident near Bay Springs as he hastened to Louin. Lee was released after treatment for minor injuries and arrived at the bank about noon.

Mrs. Wall discovered the burglary when she opened the bank at 8:30 Friday morning. She found the rear door ripped open and blinds drawn across the front door and windows. Inside, papers, empty money sacks and other bank items littered the floor.

She said burglars apparently worked leisurely, using a torch to open the outside vault where the safe deposit boxes were stored.

Their attack upon the door to the main vault damaged the lock and made difficult its opening.

The bank is operated by three women in a two-story building in the heart of this small Jasper County town. The bank has been scheduled for sale to the bank of Newton Jan. 1.

Scientist Says U. S. Develops Lithium H-Bomb

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A top scientist said Friday the United States has developed a cheap, powerful H-bomb made out of lithium.

The scientists said American physicists have known for some time that lithium—a light, silvery metal—played an apparently important part in construction of the latest model American H-bombs.

His statement followed disclosure that a group of scientists associated with the International Geophysical Year (IGY) spotted lithium in the high reaches of the atmosphere for the first time. The observations were made from stations in New Zealand and Antarctica.

Dr. Hugh Odishaw, executive director of the U.S. IGY Committee, said in a report published by Science magazine that since lithium is ordinarily not found in the high atmosphere "a plain inference is that the (discovery of it there) could be related to nuclear tests carried out during the same period as the IGY program."

STARTS IN KITCHEN

Rural Home Fire Is Fatal For Nine

AUBURN, Wash. (AP)—A fire that seemed to explode from the kitchen of a large rural home killed nine members of a farm family Friday.

The blaze, starting at 6 a.m., destroyed the Ole Hollenbach home, four miles east of this western Washington town.

The description of the fire's explosive spread was given by firemen by Hollenbach, one of three survivors, before he was taken to a hospital for treatment of burns.

Cuba Rebels Gain Control Of Province

HAVANA (UPI) Fidel Castro's Cuban rebels claimed full control of Las Villas province in central Cuba Friday and said the fall of the provincial capital of Santa Clara to the insurgents was only "a matter of hours."

Rebel leader Ernesto "Che" Guevara, Argentine-born physician and one of Castro's chief lieutenants, declared in a broadcast on the rebel radio that Santa Clara was "surrounded on four sides" by forces of both Castro's "July 26th revolutionary movement" and of the "revolutionary directorate."

Guevara said he was broadcasting from the "headquarters of the rebel army" in Sancti Spiritus, another important city of Las Villas province, which the rebels announced they had captured Thursday.

Santa Clara, one of Cuba's four largest cities, is only six hours drive from Havana on Cuba's arterial central highway.

The rebel radio also claimed capture of the port of Caibarien on the north coast of Las Villas. It said the important Cuban navy base and sugar port of Cienfuegos on the south coast was "besieged."

Atlas Satellite Timetable Given For U.S. Areas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sighting of the Atlas earth satellite will be difficult or impossible as it passes over areas of the southern and southwestern United States during daylight hours of the next two days.

The satellite, launched on Dec. 18, completed its 110th circuit around the earth at 9:30 a.m. EST Friday.

The Defense Department gave this timetable for the orbiting Atlas, indicating the times in Eastern Standard and direction it will be traveling:

- Savannah, Ga.—Dec. 27, 10:51 a.m., south, and 12:38 p.m., overhead; Dec. 28, 11:43 a.m., overhead.

Missing Plane Wreckage Found In Alaska Wilds

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) — The Air Force planned Friday to try to recover bodies of 15 men killed when a C54 transport plane crashed into an almost inaccessible canyon on Mt. Iliamna about 130 miles south of here.

The wreckage was located in a volcanic box canyon and was partially buried by snow. There was no sign of life.

Don Sheldon, a veteran bush pilot from Talkeetna, Alaska, braved a storm turbulence and continuous sulphuric fumes to get close enough to the wreckage to identify it.

The plane vanished Monday on a flight from Elmendorf Air Force Base here to Shemya in the Aleutians on a supply mission.

The only way to reach the wreckage, Sheldon said, would be to land on a glacier some distance away and go in with a ground party.

He called the canyon "one of the most inaccessible places in the world."

The plane was spotted Wednesday by Air Force search planes but it was not positively identified as the missing C54 until Thursday.

Indian Faces Charges Of Slaying Five

KENORA, Ont. (UPI)—A young Indian charged with the Christmas morning mass slaying of five persons may have been surprised while trying to criminally assault the teen-age wife of one of the victims, police said Friday.

The Indian, Tom Young, 27, was captured Thursday after being flushed with tear gas from the cabin of his grandparents. He stumbled from the cabin using his blind 75-year-old grandfather as a shield but surrendered without a fight.

The bodies of Young's father, Albert Young, 47; Constable Russell Fulford, 28; George Williams, 47, and a married couple, Walter Gordon, 20, and his wife, Clara, 17, were found in a shack along a bush country trail in the Red Lake Indian Reservation.

Police said the girl's body was bruised and her clothing torn, and there were indications the four men died trying to save her from being attacked.

Authorities said Fulford, the one-man police detachment at the community of Ear Falls 75 miles northwest of here, had been called shortly after Wednesday midnight to investigate a disturbance at the cabin.

Three hours later, a party of six policemen found the bodies of the four men and the girl. All had been shot with a high-power rifle.

REPORTED IN JACKSONVILLE

Efforts To Locate College Prexy Fail

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The president of Missouri Valley College, who dropped out of sight Christmas Eve, was reported in Jacksonville Friday but efforts to locate him were unsuccessful.

Dr. M. Earle Collins, 55-year-old college head, was en route to Orlando for the Tangerine Bowl football game Saturday where Missouri Valley plays East Texas State.

E. S. Quisenberry, head of the college cafeteria who said he rode with Collins from Springfield, Mo., said at Orlando that the college head planned to continue his trip by train Friday night.

Collins was tired and wanted to get some rest before completing the trip, Quisenberry said. The two had ridden in a day coach since leaving Missouri.

A check of 18 Jacksonville hotels and a number of motels did not disclose Collins' whereabouts. The train he was expected to board arrives in Orlando at 2:25 a.m. Train officials said, however, there was no reservation in Collins' name because none is required.

Quisenberry, who boarded the Midwest train at Kansas City, said he met Collins when he got on at Springfield. The college president originally planned to entrain at Kansas City but changed his plans so he would have more time to attend a church service, the cafeteria operator said.

Quisenberry related that he and Collins were unaware of the excitement over Collins' whereabouts. He said he didn't know where Collins planned to stay in Jacksonville. Hotels here are jammed with Gator Bowl visitors.

Mrs. Collins said police at Marshall, Mo., Thursday when her husband did not return from the church service. Quisenberry said Collins came a day earlier because of the holiday travel crush.

No member of the family, the college or police have heard from Collins since he left. A son-in-law, Jamie Hogue, said Thursday the family was not worried about him.

Collins received his master's degree at Ohio State University and in 1931 became dean of men at Tarkio College in Tarkio, Mo.

He has been a college president for 26 years. He became acting president at Tarkio in 1932, a year before he completed work for his master's degree; became president of Missouri Valley in January 1951.

Khrush Fears Mao?

Some new interpretations have been out on the change in status of Mao Tseung in Red China. This new opinion seems to indicate that not only was Mao's change not dictated by Russia but that Nikita Khrushchev, Russia's chief of state is uneasy over the new setup. He is said to fear that Red China is trying to supplant Russia as the head of world communism.

Tas news agency in Russia was said to have withheld the report of the China shift 24 hours after it was officially confirmed by the Chinese embassy in Moscow. All reaction stories from foreign correspondents were withheld for the same length of time.

This extreme caution was markedly different from the quick dissemination of news in the United States. Stories out of Nationalist China on Formosa came through two days before the Red China confirmation and were generally carried by the news services in this country as coming from reliable sources.

Effective Jan. 1, Mao is stepping down from his position as head of the Communist state in China but is retaining his position as head of the Communist party.

French sources say Mao's self-imposed limitation to purely doctrinal activities embarrasses Khrushchev far more than any political action, however drastic.

There has been evidence, on occasion, that Mao has been seeking to attain a position of power equal to or exceeding that of Khrushchev in world communism and world political power. It will be recalled that when Khrushchev was urging a summit conference, involving the heads of the different nations, he suddenly withdrew this proposal after a meeting with Mao. What Mao told Khrushchev was never revealed but it is probably that he told him Khrushchev would "lose face" in such a meeting. If the late Joseph Stalin of Russia had once set his mind on a course he would not have changed it on the advice of Mao, but Khrushchev apparently did.

Maurice Thorez, secretary general of the Communist party in France, has directed attention to the rivalry that seems to be developing between Mao and Khrushchev. When Thorez returned from a trip to Moscow six months ago he stated in private conversation that Mao was the greatest thinking brain communism had produced since Lenin. Since he said nothing about Khrushchev, the implication was clear that the head of French Communism considered Mao vastly superior in intellect to Khrushchev.

This opinion would be something that Khrushchev would find hard to tolerate and that he would attempt to offset.

Mao's influence with underdeveloped Asiatic and African countries is already competing with Khrushchev's efforts to influence them politically. While Khrushchev's pull appears to be declining in Egypt, Mao's star with the Arabs is shining brighter every day. President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt is showing distinct signs of uneasiness over Russia's political moves in the middle East but no such anxiety is revealed over Red China's trade missions.

Under Mao's influence, Red China appears ready to enter the stage of most radical Communist realizations. On the other hand, Russia, which might be said to be still in the preliminary stage between socialism and communism, has even shown some signs of drifting somewhat more toward free enterprise, particularly in farming and some of the other industries.

If Mao has become the "brain" of communism he is not likely to get Russian support. Russia likes the idea of worldwide communism under its dictation but it would not care for it under the rulership of the boss of Red China.

This rivalry between Khrushchev and Mao may serve to turn some of Russia's desires for conquest away from the United States.

More Gasoline Tax

The recent proposal by President Eisenhower that the federal tax on gasoline be increased one and one-half cents a gallon is likely to meet with mixed reaction, a large portion of which will be adverse.

There is some speculation that an even greater increase may be sought and that when congress convenes bills will be introduced seeking to raise the tax from its present three cents to a total of five cents.

State and federal taxes combined on gasoline now average about nine cents a gallon, which is equivalent to 41 percent of the average price of gasoline. A one and one-half or two cent raise would put the price close to 50 percent of the retail price.

This burden is not only far out of line with that imposed on any comparable product in general use, including luxuries, but the federal government's share of it makes it even more difficult for the state to obtain any additional revenue and most of the states need it badly for their own roads.

W. Randolph Burgess Is Called Speaking Sphinx

PARIS, FRANCE.—W. Randolph Burgess, our "other" ambassador to Paris, could be called without injustice the "speaking sphinx." That is to say, he talks but manages to remain as uncommunicative as a stone when it comes to the 15-nation "confederation" of NATO, at which Mr. Burgess represents the United States.

For some 50 minutes the other day, before about half that many reporters, the Ambassador verbally ducked and weaved with such sinuosity that he had been in a needle shower bath, he might have remained dry-skinned. True, this conference was a "backgrounder," which means no quotations or attributions. But the purpose of a backgrounder is to convey information. In this instance, the Ambassador might as well have had lockjaw for all the news that was imparted. The complaint is not so much against Ambassador Burgess, a courteous and conscientious gentleman, as against the institution he heads. NATO began almost 10 years ago as a military alliance of the Western allies against Russia. It differed from the ordinary alliance in that the United States shipped over in nominal peace-time five divisions of ground troops, a large number of air units and also assigned the mighty Sixth Fleet, operating in the Mediterranean.

It is wrong — increasingly wrong — to think of NATO merely as a military structure. It is now many things else. The North Atlantic Council meets in Paris much as a government cabinet would meet in any national capital. In addition to Mr. Burgess, Secretary Dulles sits for the State Department, Secretary McElroy for Defense, and Under Secretary Scribner for the Treasury. In short, about one-third of American executive departments are here, and last year President Eisenhower attended in person.

There is more. Recently NATO resolved itself into a corporation and manufactured the first "international" airplane. Last month Henri Spaak, addressed the fourth annual conference of NATO "parliamentarians." He greeted his audience like countrymen, calling them "good Atlantians." In mentioning Khrushchev and the latest Berlin crisis, Mr. Spaak said, "Perhaps we ought to thank him" for the togetherness of NATO. The Secretary-General then went on to speak of five "activities" in which NATO is engaged: economic, scientific, mili-

France Rises From Own Flames To Shine Again

"L'esprit de France" is not a tunes, who devised a thousand little tricks to put themselves of its own flames to shine again in power. So cheap had become the sun of Europe is unique the premiership of France that it in its quality, not only to survive, was a bargain-counter commodity, which others have done, but to But against all this sat and show its greatest strength at its weakest moment.

Five years ago, France was a power. He did not join a single beaten nation — beaten not only by the external forces of war but by an inner fatigue so malignant far from the centers of greatness, as to be the despair of Europe's He knew what France needed; he friends and the hope of Europe's; also knew what France wanted enemies. Not only was a quarter, and what was wanted was unwor- of the nation presumed to be in th. Inflation, excessive leisure, the hands of the enemy but so irresponsibility, failure to pro- powerful were Moscow's servants; duce, dependence upon America in Paris, Thorez, Duclos and their, for subsidies, small things these associates, that they dragged to Frenchmen wanted while Mother ward them all the opportunists: France lay sick, more soul sick who thrive on a nation's misfor-

But De Gaulle waited. To speak too soon would be to inflame the opportunists; to appear too early would raise the cry of Napoleon-ism. Charles de Gaulle waited. Years and years, he waited not rule France but to save France and to save Europe.

In the circumstances that faced France, such a figure as Charles de Gaulle could only be called when he was desperately needed. The Algerian crisis brought such a day. For what Algeria came to mean was not the independence of a colony or the loss of a trade area. It came to mean the death of France.

The reason so few foreigners understood this was that so many Frenchmen live in Algeria. It is not India, distant, remote, unrelated; Algeria has become part of France; those who live in Algeria vote as though they lived in Paris. Even the non-French of Algeria and Tunisia had, over the years, absorbed so much of l'esprit de France that they became cultur- ally a mixed people, partly what- ever they were before and partly French. And what is so interesting about it is that those who regard themselves as of French origin on this south shore of the Mediter- ranean were anxious to remain French. They gave their lives in a long civil war for the preservation of France as Joan of Arc had given hers for the preservation of France. It is a strictly French concept.

So in the end, they called upon De Gaulle and the vote was as close to unanimous as it is possible to get by any system of bal- loting. Charles de Gaulle is no Napoleon Bonaparte who seized power and held it by arms until he fell by arms; he is no Boulanger who emerges to take power and disappears; he is not even a Louis Philippe who bargains here and there to produce a kingdom. He submitted himself to the people's will and the people's choice. For before De Gaulle could serve France, the French people had to accept the consequences of trou- bled times. They had to discipline themselves. They had to cast aside the enchanting miseries of inflation, nonproductivity, economic dependence, political oppor- tunism. They had to accept a serious outlook upon their own times. They had a great lesson to learn from West Germany for in- stance, for there is a people that went to work.

And so, now, it is President Charles de Gaulle, first president of the Fifth French Republic. A new day has dawned in Europe— this may be a turning point, be- cause nations are imitative and if the De Gaulle experiment of ac- cepting hard times as a fact and meeting them with courage brings France forward as the leader of Europe, who can tell what an ef- fect it will have on the rest of the world? Certainly, the spectacle of turning the Christmas season in the United States into an orgy of strikes is not as stir- ring an example of national resur- rection.

1958 Rated Fairly Good By Joe Blow

NEW YORK (AP) — The day after Christmas most grownups are as good as they can be. They haven't the strength to be anything else.

Worn out with the wassail bowl the struggle to put up the Christ- mas tree, the annual turkey bot, they appease the aching head with aspirin and the rebellious stomach with bicarbonate of soda.

Half the children's new toys were broken the night before, and the other half — including, thank heaven, the drum—will be broken by this nightfall.

But millions of Americans, stretched out on the living room couch and half-listening to a wife humming in the kitchen as she sets about preparing turkey hash, know a strange contentment.

This is the season when man likes to review the dying year. Joe Blow, the typical American, lying there on his living room couch, might put it this way—if he talked out loud:

"When you get right down to it, 1958 has been pretty great. I started the year running scared, but it hasn't been half bad. Not bad at all.

"The guy down the street lost his job, but he got another one three months later, and seems to be doing all right now. Everybody else in the neighborhood is work- ing, too—whether he wants to or not.

"The boss has been pretty good to me. I thought last July he'd skip the year-end bonus this time, but he made it again—although he did say he didn't know how much, but he's been saying that ever since I was an office boy.

"The wife says things keep get- ting higher and higher, and a dol- lar won't buy what it used to. But looking back, I guess it never did. I guess inflation is a big danger, but I don't see what a guy my size can do about it—except join everybody else in viewing the problem with alarm.

"We managed to put a few more bucks in junior's college fund. There's no point in brooding about that now though. Unless his report card starts showing some im- provement he won't even be able to get admitted to a reform school.

"We been mighty lucky in one way. There hasn't been much sickness in the family. As a mat- ter of fact, average guys like me have to stay healthy. Only rich people and poor people can afford to be sick today. It costs more to deworm a dog now than it used to cost to treat appendicitis.

"I thought sure this year one of those double-dome scientists would come up with a cure for baldness and the common cold, but no—all they think about is lobbing big- ger and bigger baseballs into space.

"But, anyway, as long as they are busy doing that they don't have time to throw bombs back and forth. We still seem to have

Bad Habit May Wreck A Romance

Laura has met her Prince Charming, but she has learned that he has no use for a girl who has her bad habit. So she wants to know how to break her slavery. Scrappook the case for it gives you the latest medi- cological advice on get- ting rid of bad habits. They are 5th columnist's, so ban- ish them NOW!

Case A—412: Laura B., aged 20, is a lovely college senior.

"Dr. Crane, I have a very serious problem," she began, "for it means I may lose the only man I have ever wanted to marry."

"He is a medical student and has no use for girls who smoke. Thus far he doesn't know I am a cigaret addict."

"So I want to quit. But it is difficult for me to do so, since most of the girls in my dormi- tory smoke."

"In fact, one of the cigaret companies furnishes free cartons of cigarets to the sorority houses every week, just to help encour- age us to learn the habit."

"What is the simplest way to break my slavery to tobacco?"

BREAK BAD HABITS

Bad habits are like 5th colum- nists. They rise up and may ruin your chances at a crucial mo- ment.

Laura may thus lose the only man she has ever cared for. And if so, it will be her cigaret habit which serves as the 5th columnist.

If you are addicted to any bad habit, the best way to become free is to make an open, public revolt.

Utter a vow in the sight and hearing of others that you are quitting liquor or tobacco or over- eating or whatever may be your vice.

For this public declaration puts you on the spot. And your pride will then help you maintain that public declaration.

It is almost impossible to tap- er off with tobacco or liquor, al- though that is the only safe method for losing excess weight. That's why dieting is actually more difficult than to break the liquor or tobacco habits.

HOW TO STOP SMOKING

After you are a tobacco addict, you reach for a cigaret subcon- sciously as a means of expend- ing pent up nervous energy.

It really isn't the craving for nicotine, for experiments have shown that when confirmed cig- aret smokers had 98 per cent of the nicotine secretly removed from their tobacco, they didn't notice the difference.

No, it is primarily a "muscle hunger" that makes you feel a desire to reach for your cigarets and then wave your arm around in the act of smoking.

So try to substitute some other habitual act so that you can go through much of the same old muscular pattern.

For example, carry a candy coated gum in the same pocket or purse where you formerly had your cigarets.

Then reach for the package, shake out a piece of gum, re- store the package to your pocket and chew vigorously.

The act of chewing exercises the muscles of the jaw. They aren't as large as the arm mus- cles so they don't drain off en- ergy as fast, but you can chew longer, so the net result is about the same.

FINGER GADGETS

To help carry your nervous fingers, carry a rubber ball in your pocket so you can keep squeezing it as you walk along the street. This muscular action of hand and arm can drain off as much energy as the former habit of smoking.

And if you hostesses will keep some hand gadgets around the house so young people can use their fingers constantly, you will find they do not feel as much need for cigarets or liquor glasses.

Young people crave hand ac- tion to keep their nervous ten- sion down to a complacent level so give them more wholesome substitutes than liquor or cigarets.

Send for my booklet "How to Break the Tobacco & Liquor Hab- its," enclosing a stamped return envelope, plus 20 cents (non-pro- fit).

You give yourself a $2 wage in- crease per week when you quit cigarets for that's what they cost the average smoker.

a new international crisis every day, and I guess it would be a real surprise to wake up some morning and find we only had yesterday's crisis to worry over.

"So what? We still got peace, and any year they don't blow the bugle—well, it's a good year."

Khrush Fears Mao?

Some new interpretations have been put on the change in status of Mao Tse-tung in Red China. This new opinion seems to indicate that not only was Mao's change not dictated by Russia but that Nikita Khrushchev, Russia's chief of state is uneasy over the new setup. He is said to fear that Red China is trying to supplant Russia as the head of world communism.

Tas news agency in Russia was said to have withheld the report of the China shift 24 hours after it was officially confirmed by the Chinese embassy in Moscow. All reaction stories from foreign correspondents were withheld for the same length of time.

This extreme caution was markedly different from the quick dissemination of news in the United States. Stories out of Nationalist China on Formosa came through two days before the Red China confirmation and were generally carried by the news services in this country as coming from reliable sources.

Effective Jan. 1, Mao is stepping down from his position as head of the Communist state in China but is retaining his position as head of the Communist party.

French sources say Mao's self-imposed limitation to purely doctrinal activities embarrasses Khrushchev far more than any political action, however drastic.

There has been evidence, on occasion, that Mao has been seeking to attain a position of power equal to or exceeding that of Khrushchev in world communism and world political power. It will be recalled that when Khrushchev was urging a summit conference, involving the heads of the different nations, he suddenly withdrew this proposal after a meeting with Mao. What Mao told Khrushchev was never revealed but it is probably that he told him Khrushchev would "lose face" in such a meeting. If the late Joseph Stalin of Russia had once set his mind on a course he would not have changed it on the advice of Mao, but Khrushchev apparently did.

Maurice Thorez, secretary general of the Communist party in France, has directed attention to the rivalry that seems to be developing between Mao and Khrushchev. When Thorez returned from a trip to Moscow six months ago he stated in private conversation that Mao was the greatest thinking brain communism had produced since Lenin. Since he said nothing about Khrushchev, the implication was clear that the head of French Communism considered Mao vastly superior in intellect to Khrushchev.

This opinion would be something that Khrushchev would find hard to tolerate and that he would attempt to offset.

Mao's influence with underdeveloped Asiatic and African countries is already competing with Khrushchev's efforts to influence them politically. While Khrushchev's pull appears to be declining in Egypt, Mao's star with the Arabs is shining brighter every day. President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt is showing distinct signs of uneasiness over Russia's political moves in the middle East but no such anxiety is revealed over Red China's trade missions.

Under Mao's influence, Red China appears ready to enter the stage of most radical Communist realizations. On the other hand, Russia, which might be said to be still in the preliminary stage between socialism and communism, has even shown some signs of drifting somewhat more toward free enterprise, particularly in farming and some of the other industries.

If Mao has become the "brain" of communism he is not likely to get Russian support. Russia likes the idea of worldwide communism under its dictation but it would not care for it under the rulership of the boss of Red China.

This rivalry between Khrushchev and Mao may serve to turn some of Russia's desires for conquest away from the United States.

More Gasoline Tax

The recent proposal by President Eisenhower that the federal tax on gasoline be increased one and one-half cents a gallon is likely to meet with mixed reaction, a large portion of which will be adverse.

There is some speculation that an even greater increase may be sought and that when congress convenes bills will be introduced seeking to raise the tax from its present three cents to a total of five cents.

State and federal taxes combined on gasoline now average about nine cents a gallon, which is equivalent to 41 percent of the average price of gasoline. A one and one-half or two cent raise would put the price close to 50 percent of the retail price.

This burden is not only far out of line with that imposed on any comparable product in general use, including luxuries, but the federal government's share of it makes it even more difficult for the state to obtain any additional revenue and most of the states need it badly for their own roads.

W. Randolph Burgess Is Called Speaking Sphinx

PARIS, FRANCE — W. Randolph Burgess, our "other" ambassador to Paris could be called without injustice the "speaking sphinx." That is to say, he talks but manages to remain as uncommunicative as stone when it comes to the 15-nation "confederation" of NATO, at which Mr. Burgess represents the United States.

For some 50 minutes the other day, before about half that number of reporters, the Ambassador verbally ducked and weaved with such sinuousity that, had he been in a needle shower bath, he might have remained dry-skinned. True, this conference was a "back-grounder," which means no quotations or attributions. But the purpose of a background-er is to convey information. In this instance, the Ambassador might as well have had lockjaw for all the news that was imparted. The complaint is not so much against Ambassador Burgess, in courtly and conscientious gentleman, as against the institution behind him. NATO began almost 10 years ago as a military alliance of the Western allies against Russia. It differed from the ordinary alliance in that the United States shipped over in nominal peace-time five divisions of ground troops, a large number of air units and also assigned the mighty Sixth Fleet, operating in the Mediterranean.

It is wrong — increasingly wrong — to think of NATO merely as a military structure. It is now many things else. The North Atlantic Council meets in Paris but much as a government cabinet would meet in any national capital. In addition to Mr. Burgess, Secretary Dulles sits for the State

GEORGE SOKOLSKY'S DAYS

France Rises From Own Flames To Shine Again

"L'esprit de France" is not a fiction. This nation which rises out of its own flames to shine again as the sun of Europe is unique in its quality, not only to survive, which others have done, but to show its greatest strength at its weakest moment. Five years ago, France was a beaten nation — beaten not only by the external forces of war but by an inner fatigue so malignant as to be the despair of Europe's friends and the hope of Europe's enemies. Not only was a quarter of the nation presumed to be in the hands of the enemy but so powerful were Moscow's servants in Paris, Thorez, Duclos and their associates, that they dragged toward them all the opportunists who thrive on a nation's misfortunes, who devised a thousand little tricks to put themselves in power. So cheap had become the premiership of France that it was a bargain-counter commodity. But against all this sat and waited the personality of France, Charles de Gaulle. He did not seek power. He did not join a single political compromise. He was a country gentleman, one who lived far from the centers of greatness. He knew what France needed; he also knew what France wanted and what was wanted was unworthy. Inflation, excessive leisure, irresponsibility, failure to produce, dependence upon America for subsidies, small things which Frenchmen wanted while Mother France lay sick, more soul sick than body sick.

Little Fellows Buy Phone Stock

It's not often that the rank amateur in Wall Street buys stocks, not only as astutely as the shrewdest, most powerful pro, but also outsmarts the vast majority of men who eat, sleep and breathe the stock market 365 days a year. This historic event took place on Dec. 17, 1958 — when American Telephone & Telegraph Co. announced a three-for-one split of its stock plus a 10 per cent hike in its annual cash dividend and thereby set off one of the sharpest surges in its own shares in modern times. Who have been by far the heaviest buyers of American Telephone stock in the past several months? The little fellows, who have only enough money to buy in odd-lots — in blocks of under 100 shares. Telephone ranked third on the list of stocks most popular with odd-lot buyers in 1957. It ranked ninth on the list of stocks most popular with investors buying stocks regularly via the Monthly Investment Plan at the start of October. There's no question that the most persistent buyers of AT & T have been small fellows, newcomers to the stock market. Who have been the heaviest buyers of Telephone recently? The powerful pros who manage the giant investment funds of the country and who are responsible for the investment of over $13 billion of cash. In the first six months of 1958 the big investment funds added 200,000 shares of Telephone to their holdings, one of the largest stakes the funds ever have put into a single corporation in so short a period. A year ago AT & T was 42nd on "Vickers Favorite 50" stocks of the investment funds; six months ago Telephone was up to 15th place. Who owns Telephone's 70.3 million shares now outstanding and who will own its 211 million shares when it replaces every current share with three new ones? An army of more than 1,600,000, the highest total of stockholders of any company in the world. And this army is dominated by windows, by middle-class salary and wage-earners, by employees of Telephone.

And who has been scoring Telephone shares through the years as a stock with no more glamour than a deposit in the corner savings bank? Most brokers, most wealthy individual investors, Telephone didn't even place on the list of stocks most popular in 1957 with buyers in round-lots — blocks of 100 shares. It was only a few months ago, when reports indicated that Telephone had jumped to the No. one profit-maker of American corporations, that a couple of brokerage firms bothered to dig into the statistics about the company. And their glowing recommendations of the stock were generally shrugged off.

My mother was among the happy army on Dec. 17, for she has long owned a block of Telephone stock (to the amusement of many of the experts I know) and she literally gurgled at the prospect of having three shares for each one she now holds. "The split doesn't increase your interest in Telephone one bit," I warned that evening. "You have one share at $223 now; if the split were taking effect tonight, you'd have three shares worth between $74 and $75 — and each share would represent one-third the interest of your one share now. Your benefit comes from the rise in the dividend. You'll get $3.30 on each new share or $9.90 a year on three instead of $9.90 on one."

"Don't be so technical," she retorted. "Three shares at $74 makes me feel richer than one share at $223. And with the price of the stock so much lower, more people will be interested in buying it on each new share or $9.90 a year wait and see."

Which, in a few simple words, explains why the world's largest utility is splitting its stock for the first time in its history. But De Gaulle waited. To speak too soon would be to inflame the opportunists; to appear too early would raise the cry of Napoleonism. Charles de Gaulle waited. Years and years, he waited not to rule France but to save France and to save Europe.

In the circumstances that faced France, such a figure as Charles de Gaulle could only be called for when he was desperately needed. The Algerian crisis brought such a day. For what Algeria came to mean was not the independence of a colony or the loss of a trade area. It came to mean the death of France.

The reason so few foreigners understood this was that so many Frenchmen live in Algeria. It is not India, distant, remote, unrelated; Algeria has become part of France; those who live in Algeria vote as though they lived in Paris. Even the non-French of Algeria and Tunisia had, over the years, absorbed so much of L'esprit de France that they became culturally a mixed people, partly what they were before and partly French. And what is so interesting about it is that those who regard themselves as of French origin on this south shore of the Mediterranean were anxious to remain French. They gave their lives in a long civil war for the preservation of France as Joan of Arc had given hers for the preservation of France. It is a strictly French concept.

So in the end, they called upon De Gaulle and the vote was as close to unanimous as it is possible to get by any system of balloting. Charles de Gaulle is no Napoleon Bonaparte who seized power and held it by arms until he fell by arms; he is no Boulanger who emerges to take power and disappears; he is not even a Louis Philippe who bargains here and there to produce a kingdom. He submitted himself to the people and the people chose him. For before De Gaulle could serve, he had to accept the consequences of troubled times. They had to discipline themselves. They had to cast aside the enchanting miseries of inflation, nonproductivity, economic dependence, political opportunism. They had to accept a serious outlook upon their own times. They had a great lesson to learn from West Germany for instance, for there is a people that went to work.

And so, now, it is President Charles de Gaulle, first president of the Fifth French Republic. A new day has dawned in Europe; this may be a turning point, because nations are imitative and if the De Gaulle experiment of accepting hard times as a fact and meeting them with courage brings France forward as the leader of Europe, who can tell what an effect it will have on the rest of the Western world? Certainly, the spectacle of turning the Christmas season in the United States into an orgy of strikes is not stirring an example of national resurrection.

confessions to the grand jurors. They, too, were held without bail. The grand jury also returned an indictment charging the mother-in-law and a man identified as Ralph Winterstein with posing as the nurse and Frank Duncan to obtain a fraudulent annulment of the attorney's marriage last Aug. 7. A bench warrant was issued for Winterstein's arrest. He was described as an ex-convict. Duncan told reporters he plans to return to Los Angeles, where police located him Thursday, living under an assumed name. Duncan said he plans to meet his wife's father, Elias Kupczyk, who is expected to arrive in Los Angeles Sunday from his home in Canada. Dist. Atty. Gustafson said Moya gave the jurors this account of the crime: "Moya said he lured Olga Duncan from her apartment by telling her that Frank was drunk and passed out in the rear seat of a car parked near the apartment. "When she went outside to see for herself, Baldonado was lying in the back seat, posing as Duncan. "When Olga looked inside, Moya struck her from the rear." Gustafson said Moya's story matched that told by Baldonado, a 25-year-old itinerant farm worker. Both told of strangling and pistol-whipping the woman before burying her in a shallow grave near a canyon road in Ventura County. The elder Mrs. Duncan said after her arrest that she was innocent, that "those two men were trying to blackmail me." She said Moya and Baldonado were attempting to get back a legal fee her son collected from a man who later was convicted and jailed. Senator Cooper Will Back Nixon In '60 Campaign

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Sen. John Sherman Cooper (R - Ky.) told United Press International Friday that he will support Vice President Richard M. Nixon as a presidential candidate in 1960. Cooper, a member of the so-called "liberal" wing of the Republican Party, said, "I've been for him (Nixon) and am for him. I like Mr. Rockefeller, but I'm for Mr. Nixon." Nelson Rockefeller, Gov. - elect of New York, has been mentioned frequently as a possible presidential candidate since his surprise victory over Democratic Gov. Averell Harriman in November. Cooper, in Kentucky for the Christmas holidays, has been mentioned prominently for the post of Senate minority leader in the new Congress. Cooper, whose name was put forward for the post by Sen. Prescott Bush (R-Conn.) said, "I'm not asking people to be for me, but if nominated, I would accept."

The expected devaluation was part of the government's sweeping financial program aimed at giving France a truly sound currency and stabilizing the country's shaky economy. Informed sources predicted that a government on the program would include devaluation of the franc, a series of strong austerity measures designed to cut down domestic consumption of French-produced goods, and a massive government program aimed at heading off unemployment.

Goldfine Loses Motion For New Trial On Charge

BOSTON, Mass. (AP) — U.S. Dist. Judge Charles E. Wyzanski Jr. Friday denied motions for acquittal and a new trial of industrialist Bernard Goldfine and his secretary who were convicted of contempt of court last Monday. The court also denied a motion for a reduction of sentence.

Goldfine was sentenced to three months and Miss Mildred Paperman, his secretary, to 10 days. Their sentences are scheduled to begin Jan. 7. They were convicted of criminal contempt for failure to produce complete records for the Internal Revenue Service as ordered by the court.

Goldfine also faces trial in Washington March 16, on contempt of Congress charges for failure to answer some questions about his financial affairs before a congressional subcommittee. Washington hearings brought out that Goldfine had given gifts to Sherman Adams, then presidential assistant, and other political figures.

Adams, who denied wrongdoing, subsequently resigned his White House post. Wyzanski later admitted the pair to bail, pending their appeal to the U.S. Court of Appeals.

Last Monday, Wyzanski released both Goldfine and his secretary in $1,000 personal recognizance. The bail decision, court attaches explained, meant it was unlikely they would begin serving contempt sentences Jan. 7 — that the appeal and the decision on the appeal would not come until after that date.

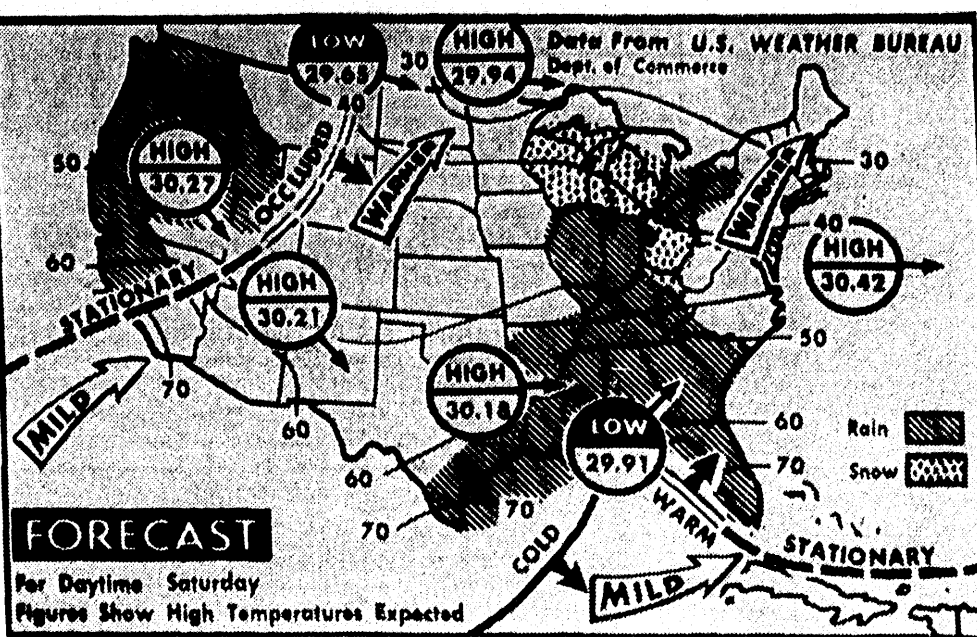

Goldfine and Miss Paperman, in sharp contrast to their dismayed looks after they had been sentenced, smiled broadly Friday. Goldfine, his face beaming, said: "I have scored a distinct victory."

In admitting Miss Paperman and Goldfine to bail Judge Wyzanski said: "There has been a question of my fairness raised. That is not a frivolous question and must be decided by the court above."

41 Colleges Get AEC Grants For New Equipment

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Atomic Energy Commission Friday announced approval of grants totaling $2,264,965 to 41 colleges for laboratory equipment needed to expand their nuclear educational programs. The new awards, the fifth in a series, bring to $10,929,674 the amount allotted to 106 educational institutions.

Friday's grants includes funds to seven engineering schools for the purchase of atomic reactors for teaching purposes. Receiving these funds were the Universities of Illinois, Maryland, Texas, surface on the moon and, therefore, no "sea level" to use as a starting point. The naval observatory for that reason fixed an imaginary surface level from which to measure elevations on the "marginal zone" of the moon. This is the part of the surface outlined against the sky at the edges of the disk.

At first many liberals in both the Democratic and Republican parties indicated they would be eager to vote against Alford. They saw the test chiefly as a civil rights issue, since Hays was defeated mainly because of his moderate stand on the integration problem.

This zone comprises only 30 percent of the area visible from the earth. But Watts said "about 450,000 measured elevations" have been charted there.

"It is expected that these charts will facilitate the production of topographical charts of the remainder of the visible portion of the moon's surface," he said.

A major goal, he said, is to use the new charts to fix upon a landmark at the edge of the moon which can be used by astronomers to determine the sphere's exact location.

issued a public warning to hunters "to make plans before you come over here to hunt."

"This is the worst I have ever seen," McDonald said. "They started knocking on my door on Christmas Eve and continued through Christmas Day."

The Tensas antlerless season opened in parts of the parish on Christmas Eve in an effort to reduce what officials called an "overpopulated deer herd." It will continue until Jan. 1. There will not be an antlerless season in Madison Parish.

From all indications, the doe kill has been minor compared to pre-season expectations. Officials, however, were taking precautions for the Chicago game management area antlerless season which opens Sunday until Jan. 1.

"Many hunters came here on Christmas Eve under the impression that the season had already opened on the Chicago game management area," McDonald said.

It was for the game management area hunt on the Chicago Mills land that Easterly moved the additional enforcement agents in to Tensas.

Checking stations will be maintained from three points surrounding the 30,000-acre area and hunters must obtain a permit before going into the woods.

Stations will open at 5 a.m. and close at 5 p.m. daily throughout the season. Only doe deer will be legal game on the Chicago game management area during the season and deer must be checked with officials at the stations.

All of the Chicago game management area will be open for 6,000 acres, which have been marked by signs and painted trees.

Meanwhile, hunters continued to make camp throughout Tensas. Even in Franklin Parish sportsmen armed with rifles and shotguns took their stands on the highways, an act which is against the law.

"We've always had a lot of hunters here," McDonald said, "but I've never seen anything like this in my entire life."

McDonald urged hunters to be careful. "We're praying that we won't have a hunting tragedy," he stated.

Italian Seers Cautious On Predictions

ROME (AP) — Italian soothsayers who rushed madly into print in the past have gone reluctant. With reason.

Newspapers that once printed the year-end prognostications without a backward look have taken to drawing a head on the seers and checking their past accomplishments. Not too good, usually.

The checks have given the crystal ball and tarot boys the jitters. So that with the year now virtually ended, the nation's major soothsayers have still not come out of their annual trance to tell the world what it faces in 1959.

Last year, in what by then had become an annual contest to be the first with the worst in print, most of the hypnotic-eyed masters had given their warnings by mid-December.

But not this year. Rome's Paese Sera, in an unkind cut Friday devoted a whole page of cartoons and comment to some of the things that were forecast but did not happen in old 1958. Examples:

Eugenio Mastroianni, known as "Genius," one of Rome's most noted soothsayers, predicted the reconciliation of Ingrid Bergman and Roberto Rossellini. The Swedish star is now honeymooning with her new Swedish husband.

"Madame Nobiliti" predicted that Queen Elizabeth's life would be endangered by a difficult pregnancy. It wasn't.

Prof. Achille d'Angelo, "The Sorcerer of Naples," predicted that hantamweight Mario d'Arata of Italy again would win the world title in his weight, that Italy's national soccer team would beat North Ireland and qualify for the 1960 championships and that Achille Lauro, once the Monarchist mayor of Naples, would score a big election victory. Wrong on all three.

Other oracular wisecracks for 1958 that boomeranged: Juan Peron would return to power in Argentina; there would be election disorders in Italy (they were the quietest ever); and actress Sophia Loren would have a child.

One of the soothsayers, "The Sorcerer of Rome," did come closer.

confessions to the grand jurors. They, too, were held without bail. The grand jury also returned an indictment charging the mother-in-law and a man identified as Ralph Winterstein with posing as the nurse and Frank Duncan to obtain a fraudulent annulment of the attorney's marriage last Aug. 7.

A bench warrant was issued for Winterstein's arrest. He was described as an ex-convict.

Duncan told reporters he plans to return to Los Angeles, where police located him Thursday, living under an assumed name.

Duncan said he plans to meet his wife's father, Elias Kupczyk, who is expected to arrive in Los Angeles Sunday from his home in Canada.

Dist. Atty. Gustafson said Moya gave the jurors this account of the crime:

"Moya said he lured Olga Duncan from her apartment by telling her that Frank was drunk and passed out in the rear seat of a car parked near the apartment.

"When she went outside to see for herself, Baldonado was lying in the back seat, posing as Duncan.

"When Olga looked inside, Moya struck her from the rear."

Gustafson said Moya's story matched that told by Baldonado, a 25-year-old itinerant farm worker. Both told of strangling and pistol-whipping the woman before burying her in a shallow grave near a canyon road in Ventura County.

The elder Mrs. Duncan said after her arrest that she was innocent, that "those two men were trying to blackmail me." She said Moya and Baldonado were attempting to get back a legal fee her son collected from a man who later was convicted and jailed.

But Gustafson said she offered the two men $6,000 to kill Olga because "she didn't want another woman to have her boy."

She also is accused of posing in court as her daughter-in-law to obtain a fraudulent annulment of the marriage.

An autopsy disclosed that Olga suffocated—either from the throttling or from being buried alive.

Frank Duncan, somberly dressed, wearing horn-rimmed glasses, talked nervously with his mother's attorney in the corridor outside the jury room. News men asked if he would stand behind his mother.

"I don't want to get involved in this. No comment," he said.

Earlier he told reporters "I find it fantastic to believe that mother is involved in Olga's death. . . . She couldn't kill anything, not even an animal."

Tragic Yule Holiday Toll Rises Hourly

1958 hour-by-hour death count was running 15 to 20 fatalities higher than that of the "Black Christmas" week-end. Almost seven Americans were dying in traffic every 60 minutes.

"The death count has run consistently ahead from the start, not only ahead of our estimate of a 620 death total, but ahead of the all-time pace," the safety council spokesmen said.

"We have beseeched the motorists and pointed out that law enforcement this year is probably better than during any holiday in the past. But it hasn't helped."

The only hope of averting a record, experts indicated, was that motorists would suddenly get good and scared of the mounting toll.

On the pessimistic side, the last minute rush for home at the end of the holidays was still to come.

Ironically, perfect holiday weather appeared to be the main factor boosting the Christmas death toll. There were no major snow and ice storms to force motorists to slow down and live.

Before the holiday's start, the council's worst fear was that traffic accidents would kill 620 persons during the 102-hour period ending at midnight Sunday. Such a toll would have been bad enough, representing 140 more traffic fatalities than the 480 normal for a non-holiday period of the same length.

Within 24 hours after the holiday's start, however, Safety Council statisticians admitted frightening evidence that their first estimate had been far too optimistic.

The death rate kept rising, despite one of the tightest police campaigns against reckless driving on record. In Chicago alone, more than 60 motorists had been arrested on drunk driving charges by Friday morning. Emergency orders were in effect elsewhere in the nation. But there was no antidote against drivers' overwhelming urge to step on the gas.

In many cases, holiday drinking played a fatal role in the tragedies.

The weather was ideal for the highway slaughter. Snow or rain might have forced drivers to proceed with care, but skies were clear and the highways inviting in most parts of the country.

This year, fires added to the holiday tragedy. In two blazes Friday, a mother and eight of her children died in their flaming home near Auburn, Wash., and a millionaire businessman, his wife, and three of their children perished in their blazing mansion at Richmond, Va.

A United Press International count at 10 p.m., EST, showed 338 deaths in traffic, 62 in fires, 3 in plane crashes and 44 in miscellaneous accidents for a holiday total of 447.

California had the worst death record with 38 fatalities, followed by Texas with 28, New York state with 25, Ohio and Pennsylvania with 19 each, North Carolina with 16 and Illinois with 15.

Goldfine Loses Motion For New Trial On Charge

BOSTON, Mass. (AP) — U.S. Dist. Judge Charles E. Wyzanski Jr. Friday denied motions for acquittal and a new trial of industrialist Bernard Goldfine and his secretary who were convicted of contempt of court last Monday.

The court also denied a motion for a reduction of sentence.

Goldfine was sentenced to three months and Miss Mildred Paperman, his secretary, to 10 days. Their sentences are scheduled to begin Jan. 7.

They were convicted of criminal contempt for failure to produce complete records for the Internal Revenue Service as ordered by the court.

Goldfine also faces trial in Washington March 16, on contempt of Congress charges for failure to answer some questions about his financial affairs before a congressional subcommittee.

Washington hearings brought out that Goldfine had given gifts to Sherman Adams, then presidential assistant, and other political figures.

Adams, who denied wrongdoing, subsequently resigned his White House post.

Wyzanski later admitted the pair to bail, pending their appeal to the U.S. Court of Appeals.

Last Monday, Wyzanski released both Goldfine and his secretary in $1,000 personal recognizance.

The bail decision, court attaches explained, meant it was unlikely either would begin serving contempt sentences Jan. 7 — that the appeal and the decision on the appeal would not come until after that date.

Goldfine and Miss Paperman, in sharp contrast to their dismayed looks after they had been sentenced, smiled broadly Friday.

Goldfine, his face beaming, said: "I have scored a distinct victory."

In admitting Miss Paperman and Goldfine to bail Judge Wyzanski said: "There has been a question of my fairness raised. That is not a frivolous question and must be decided by the court above."

41 Colleges Get AEC Grants For New Equipment

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Atomic Energy Commission Friday announced approval of grants totaling $2,254,965 to 41 colleges for laboratory equipment needed to expand their nuclear educational programs.

The new awards, the fifth in a series, bring to $10,929,674 the amount allotted to 106 educational institutions.

Friday's grants includes funds to seven engineering schools for the purchase of atomic reactors for teaching purposes. Receiving these funds were the Universities of Illinois, Maryland, Texas, Washington, West Virginia and Wisconsin and Kansas State College.

This brings to 30 the number of teaching reactors in operation or planned with the help of AEC grants.

Stamp Collectors Collect New Orleans (UPI) —

Some burglars apparently had some late Christmas maling to do. Thieves knocked off the handles of a safe at a Tchoupitoulas St. business concern Wednesday, stole two dollars worth of stamps and fled. No money was taken, just stamps. A C. Boyd reported the theft to police.

Maryland Police Have Busy Day Chasing Youth

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A 17-year-old youth kept Washington and nearby Maryland police busy Friday.

First he stole a car, then he robbed a liquor store. To make his getaway he stole another car.

Police chased him around the suburbs for five hours during which he knocked down a patrolman while driving the wrong way on a one-way street.

Finally he lost all pursuers and stopped at a second liquor store to buy a bottle. In parking he hit the storeowner's auto.

publisher's charge that Alford illegally won the election with a write-in campaign and a conspiracy involving Arkansas Gov. Orval Faubus.

In a 3 to 2 decision, the committee said Alford should be asked to stand aside pending a thorough investigation of the charges. The committee did not rule on the charges themselves.

At first many liberals in both the Democratic and Republican parties indicated they would be eager to vote against Alford. They saw the test chiefly as a civil rights issue, since Hays was defeated mainly because of his moderate stand on the integration problem.

surface on the moon and, therefore, no "sea level" to use as a starting point.

The naval observatory for that reason fixed an imaginary surface level from which to measure elevations on the "marginal zone" of the moon. This is the part of the surface outlined against the sky at the edges of the disk.

This zone comprises only 30 per cent of the area visible from the earth. But Watts said "about 450,000 measured elevations" have been charted there.

"It is expected that these charts will facilitate the production of topographical charts of the remainder of the visible portion of the moon's surface," he said.

A major goal, he said, is to use the new charts to fix upon a land mark at the edge of the moon which can be used by astronomers to determine the sphere's exact location.

Local Officer, Airmen Face Hunt Charges

issued a public warning to hunters "to make plans before you come over here to hunt."

"This is the worst I have ever seen," McDonald said. "They started knocking on my door on Christmas Eve and continued through Christmas Day."

The Tensas antlerless season opened in parts of the parish on Christmas Eve in an effort to reduce what officials called an "overpopulated deer herd." It will continue until Jan. 1. There will not be an antlerless season in Madison Parish.

From all indications, the doe kill has been minor compared to pre-season expectations.

Officials, however, were taking precautions for the Chicago game management area antlerless season which opens Sunday until Jan. 1.

"Many hunters came here on Christmas Eve under the impression that the season had already opened on the Chicago game management area," McDonald said.

It was for the game management area hunt on the Chicago Mills land that Easterly moved the additional enforcement agents into Tensas.

Checking stations will be maintained from three points surrounding the 30,000-acre area and hunters must obtain a permit before going into the woods.

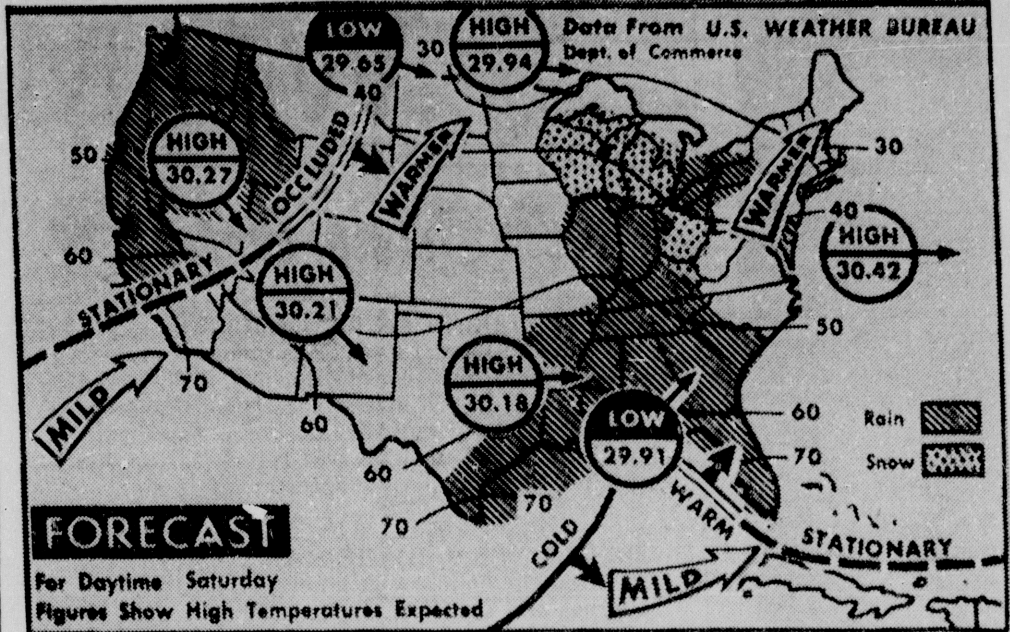

Stations will open at 5 a.m. and close at 5 p.m. daily throughout the season. Only doe deer will be legal game on the Chicago game management area during the season and deer must be checked with officials at the stations.

All of the Chicago game management area will be open for the season with the exception of 6,000 acres, which have been marked by signs and painted trees.

Meanwhile, hunters continued to make camp throughout Tensas. Even in Franklin Parish sportsmen armed with rifles and shotguns took their stands on the highways, an act which is against the law.

"We've always had a lot of hunters here," McDonald said, "but I've never seen anything like this in my entire life."

McDonald urged hunters to be careful. "We're praying that we won't have a hunting tragedy," he stated.

Italian Seers Cautious On Predictions

ROME (AP) — Italian soothsayers who rushed madly into print in the past have gone reluctant. With reason.

Newspapers that once printed the year-end prognostications without a backward look have taken to drawing a bead on the seers and checking their past accomplishments. Not too good, usually.

The checks have given the crystal ball and turban boys the jitters. So that with the year now virtually ended, the nation's major seers have still not come out of their annual trance to tell the world what it faces in 1959.

Last year, in what by then had become an annual contest to be the first with the worst in print, most of the hypnotic-eyed seers had given their warnings by mid-December.

But not this year.

Rome's Paese Sera, in an unkind cut Friday devoted a whole page of cartoons and comment to some of the things that were forecast but did not happen in old 1958. Examples:

Eugenio Mastroiotti, known as "Genius," one of Rome's most noted soothsayers, predicted the reconciliation of Ingrid Bergman and Roberto Rossellini. The Swedish star is now honeymooning with her new Swedish husband.

"Madame Nobile" predicted that Queen Elizabeth's life would be endangered by a difficult pregnancy. It wasn't.

Prof. Achille d'Angelo, "The Sorcerer of Naples," predicted that bantamweight Mario d'Agata of Italy again would win the world title in his weight, that Italy's national soccer team would beat North Ireland and qualify for the world championships and that Achille Lauro, once the Monarchist mayor of Naples, would score a big election victory. Wrong on all three.

Other oracular wisecracks for 1958 that boomeranged: Juan Peron would return to power in Argentina; there would be election disorders in Italy (they were the quietest ever); and actress Sophia Loren would have a child.

One of the soothsayers, "The Sorcerer of Rome," did come closer.

Exchange New Messages With U. S. Satellite

Houston and relayed back at Fort Stewart, Ga.

The tests took place at 9:38 a.m., EST, 1:40 a.m., EST, 1:20 p.m. EST, and 3:15 p.m. EST, as the mammoth satellite made its 110th, 111th, 112th and 113th passes around the globe.

On the latter two passes, the Atlas sent its messages both by voice and by teletypewriter.

Friday's experiments ended a Christmas Day off for the satellite. The Pentagon has cut communications tests with the missile to a "reduced schedule" until next Monday. It plans a full program of voice and teletype experiments after that for the remainder of the satellite's expected 20-day life.

Defense officials declined to say whether the Atlas would broadcast a special New Year's message from the President to the world.

Warsaw Enjoys Biggest Holiday Since Invasion

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Warsaw began returning slowly to normal life Friday after this Communist-ruled country's biggest family Christmas celebration since the Nazi invasion of 1939.

For three days business came to a virtual standstill in the capital and most of the rest of Poland. Restaurants, shops and factories were closed. The telegraph was shut down, Communist party headquarters was shuttered, traffic lights were turned off. Even the police went on holiday.

A visiting American publisher, Miss Eleanor McClatchy of the Sacramento, Calif., Bee, arrived Dec. 26 without having found any officials to record in her passport that she had passed through Poland. They were all off for the holidays.

For the first time Communist chief Wladyslaw Gomulka's policy of permitting free enterprise and encouraging gifts from relatives abroad was in full swing. The Poles, who have had stable prices and currency for a year, were able to buy the necessities for a big blowout.

The churches were crowded throughout the holidays. Most Poles left their family celebrations only for Mass.

THE ARMED WERE UNARMED
NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Sidney Pagert, 15, and Louis Mendel, 12, were each carrying shotguns Wednesday when they were held up by two Negro bandits. The teen-agers reported to police that the robbers approached them near railroad tracks, held them up, took their .410 gauge shotguns and fled.

'Joys Of Christmas' Club Topic

The Rev. Ronald Wilkins, pastor of the Alto Presbyterian Church, spoke on the joys of Christmas and Mrs. C. M. Noble, Jr. gave the devotional on Tuesday night when the members of the Mangham Literary Club held their annual Christmas party.

Mrs. Ed Jones and Mrs. Traylor Jones invited the members into the candlelit Fred Jones Fellowship Hall, at the Mangham Methodist Church where pink and silver Christmas decorations were used.

The tables were covered with pink silk cloths and the centerpiece was made of stylized flowers with angels hair and held pink camellias and tiny angels.

The Christmas gifts were arranged the length of the tables. Mrs. Noble's devotional was taken from James W. Sells article, Christmas Gifts I'd Like. She said, "These are the gifts I would like if I were:

A rural mail carrier: A memory large enough to remember all the joyous faces I see at Christmas-time, and an ability to forget all the sadness and regret in the faces of those who expect and were disappointed.

A schoolteacher: A letter from the young man who once I thought hopeless, but who now has become a success. If he were to tell me that my teaching inspired him and made of him a man, I would be forever happy.

A soldier in a foreign land: Regular letters from home; an assurance that my family and my church are remembering me in prayer.

A Sunday school teacher: A recognition from the church that I am a worthwhile part of the family of God.

An elderly person: A visit once every week from someone who is cheerful, happy and can bring good news.

A country preacher: A new book for my mind; a new coat for my wife; a tire for my car and a stocking full of patience from my congregation.

A lonesome "no count": Forgiveness for past sins; a little hope for the future, and a kind word from my one time friend who is now Mr. Big Shot.

A country church: A new coat of paint for my walls; a new rug on my floor; a new sign on the road... I am the House of God. People should treat me for what I am.

Myself: An understanding of Christmas — for Christmas is not a rush to buy tinsel and toys. It is gentleness, love, kindness, attention and an act of thoughtfulness toward those whom many neglect.

Uncle Sam: A promise of support to the finest ideals of the past from loyal citizens and faithful patriots.

The Rev. Wilkins, in telling of the joys of Christmas pointed out many interesting events in the life of Jesus. He concluded his talk by telling the story of Edwin Markham "How the Great Guest Came." He described the saintly cobbler who dreamed that the Lord would visit him the next day. He told of the cobbler's preparation of his shop in anticipation of his Heavenly visitor. During the day the cobbler was interrupted three times... once by a beggar, whom the cobbler received and allowed to rest, then gave him the best pair of shoes in his shop for his journey; once by an old woman, heavily burdened, whom he fed some of the food which he had prepared for Christ; and then by a small orphan boy who had no home. The cobbler carried him to his own home to be cared for by his wife, then hurried back to his shop to wait for the Lord. When night came he was disappointed and cried out "Why did you forget that this was the day?"

In the silence he heard a voice telling him that three times God came to his door — once in the form of the beggar; again in the form of the old woman; and last in the form of a child... and had found a warm welcome each time.

During the social hour, megringue puffs filled with strawberry ice cream, cheese straws and coffee were served to Mrs. Woody Marlow, Miss Ola Cooper, Mrs.

YOUR PROBLEMS

It's Your Husband Who Should Get Earful

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: The day I married I became a beggar. Not the kind that walks the streets with a tin cup. This is worse. During my 10 years of marriage, whether I stayed at home or worked out, I had to account for every penny that passed my hands. "Why did you make a long distance call? Why did you buy a new broom, the old one was all right. Where's the change from the dollar I gave you for cough medicine?"

Once when I needed a winter coat my husband bought a used one from his sister. It was a lovely coat, and not badly worn, but that was nine years ago and I'm still wearing it.

Our home is shabby. Almost everything needs re-doing. The odd part of it is we aren't hard up for money. We have a good bank account, my husband is well employed and there's no reason for us to live like this.

How does a woman get out of the beggar class after 10 years? How can she regain her dignity? Please tell me.—ASHAMED

You're so articulate when it comes to expressing yourself on paper, too bad you're incapable of uttering these words to your husband, who SHOULD be getting the earful.

No woman (or man) should have to beg his mate for money. Marriage is a partnership. Women who work and hand over their paychecks, then plead for a hand out are fools. Men who give The Little Woman every dime, then beg for cigaret money are stupid.

The method of handling the family finances should be discussed before marriage. This isn't mercenary, it's sensible. And it prevents problems later. Money can be more than something with which to pay bills. It can be a club with which to beat a spouse over the head.

Ten years is a long time, but I suggest you sit down with the miser and insist on an allowance as of now. If he refuses, see a lawyer about a separation. Perhaps when he learns he may have to support two households, he'll change his tune.

Dear Ann: How can I get this fellow to stop treating me like a sister? I am 22 and he is 25. We've had a standing date every Saturday night for four and a half months.

I would like to marry this man but how in the world will we ever reach that stage when he can't seem to get up the nerve to kiss me goodnight?

In the theater the other night, during a particularly moving scene, my hand accidentally brushed his. He jumped a foot. I'm sure he thought I was trying to hold hands with him. It was terribly embarrassing.

I'm not the aggressive type but I fear if I don't make some move, this may go down in history as the longest platonic friendship in history. Can you help me? —STONE WALL

Dear Stone Wall: He's the one who needs help—not you. A 25 year old man who has had 8 dates with a girl and "jumps a foot" at the touch of her hand, is no red-hot candidate for marriage.

If this relationship hasn't produced ample voltage in four and a half months to spark a good night kiss, I suspect Lohinvar is not hitting on all cylinders.

Tell him goodbye and good luck and point him in the direction of a head doctor.

Dear Ann: Two years ago my father left my mother to marry a much younger woman who I must admit is pretty.

I miss my father very much and am always excited when he calls and invites me to dinner and a movie. I keep hoping we will be alone so we can have a nice talk. But it never turns out that way. He always has his new wife along.

She never says much, but the fact that she is there spoils my evening. I've tried to like her but I just can't. I feel like a big hypocrite because to me she'll always be the woman who broke my mother's heart and ruined our family life.

Do I have the right to ask my father to leave her at home when he invites me out? My mother has asked me to try to overcome my bitter feelings, but I just can't. Please advise me. I am 16 years old.—PAT

Dear Pat: If you find it impossible to accept your father's new wife handle the situation tactfully, like this:

Drop him a note (at his place of business) and say you'd appreciate it if next time you could talk with him privately. At the next meeting explain your consideration time with him precious and would he please save it just for you. He should understand.

He was a wonderful father and friend and I don't know how I could have loved him more. Now that I'm married and away from home I'm so happy knowing my mother has someone with whom to share her life and that she is not lonely.

INDOOR-OUTDOOR KITCHEN—Is the design for this informal kitchen area, part of a large family room for a summer cottage or a retirement retreat. Adequate storage space and the custom look of the equipment keep this "always-on-view" kitchen ready for inspection at all times. Placement of the oven near the doorway of terrace permits simplified service for either indoor or outdoor meals. The warm, sunny outlook of the room is accented by the clear yellow shade of appliances and cabinets, by blue-and-white striped fabrics, and by white-painted walls and ceiling.

YOUR BABY AND MINE

New Mother Faces Blues And Confusing Advice

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

A crucial time for the young mother is the first week or so after she comes home from the hospital with her first baby.

Because she stays so short a time in the hospital, these days, she has the illusion that she is well. Then she gets home, tries to move around, take care of the baby, put on her regular - sized clothes and face all the responsibilities of her home — and dependency settles over her.

She has after the birth blues, but whatever the name it is a very real thing as any young mother will tell you. For the moment the sky and all her world are dark blue.

Along with her necessity to adjust herself to reality about herself, her child and her limited strength, are the eager friends who come to see the baby, ask her the same questions over and over and are all bursting with good advice they want to press upon her. "Now, I had my Jimmy scheduled so he slept all night by the time he was 10 days old," says one.

"Don't try to schedule him, just let him eat when he is hungry," says another.

And torn between these two conflicting testimonies is the poor young mother, who would love to sleep all night, but feels — as her doctor has told her — that the baby should be fed when it is hungry.

Already she feels guilty as if these know-it-alls have some system of which she is ignorant and if she only knew it life could be so easy.

It is smart for the young mother to put her faith in her baby's doctor and a good authoritative baby book. The book is right there when the doctor cannot be and it says the same thing consistently. Its very definiteness is bolstering to the mother's lack of confidence.

And, of course, she needs to learn to depend upon her own good sense and do her own experimenting to know what pleases her baby and fits in best with her own pattern of living. Friends, well-wishers, relatives, neighbors would help most by giving her a lift with the baby care or the household care, or a good dish brought in for a meal, rather than confusing and upsetting her with what may be excellent but conflicting ideas and advice.

She'll be eternally grateful for this.

'Joys Of Christmas' Club Topic

The Rev. Ronald Wilkins, pastor of the Alto Presbyterian Church, spoke on the Joys of Christmas and Mrs. C. M. Noble, Jr., gave the devotional on Tuesday night when the members of the Mangham Literary Club held their annual Christmas party.

Mrs. Ed Jones and Mrs. Traylor Jones invited the members into the candlelit Fred Jones Fellowship Hall, at the Mangham Methodist Church where pink and silver Christmas decorations were used.

The tables were covered with pink silk clothes and the centerpiece was made of styrofoam covered with angels and it held pink camellias and tiny angels.

The Christmas gifts were arranged the length of the tables. Mrs. Nobles' devotional was taken from James W. Sells article, Christmas Gifts I'd Like. She said, "These are the gifts I would like if I were:

A rural mail carrier: A memory large enough to remember all the joyous faces I see at Christmas-time, and an ability to forget all the sadness and regret in the faces of those who expect and were disappointed.

A schoolteacher: A letter from the young man who once I thought hopeless, but who now has become a success. If he were to tell me that my teaching influenced him and made of him a man, I would be forever happy.

A soldier in a foreign land: Regular letters from home; an assurance that my family and my church are remembering me in prayer.

A Sunday school teacher: A recognition from the church that I am a worthwhile part of the family of God.

An elderly person: A visit once every week from someone who is cheerful, happy and can bring good news.

A country preacher: A new book for my mind; a new coat for my wife; a tire for my car and a stocking full of patience from my congregation.

A lonesome "no count": Forgiveness for past sins; a little hope for the future, and a kind word from my one time friend who is now Mr. Big Shot.

A country church: A new coat of paint for my walls; a new rug on my floor; a new sign on the road. . . I am the House of God. People should treat me for what I am.

Myself: An understanding of Christmas — for Christmas is not a rush to buy tinsel and toy. It is gentleness, love, kindness, attention and an act of thoughtfulness toward those whom many neglect.

Uncle Sam: A promise of support to the finest ideals of the past from loyal citizens and faithful patriots.

The Rev. Wilkins, in telling of the joys of Christmas pointed out many interesting events in the life of Jesus. He concluded his talk by telling the story of Edwin Markham "How the Great Guest Came." He described the saintly cobbler who dreamed that the Lord would visit him the next day. He told of the cobbler's preparation of his shop in anticipation of the day the cobbler was interrupted three times. . . once by a beggar, whom the cobbler received and allowed to rest; then gave him the best pair of shoes in his shop for his journey; once by an old woman, heavily burdened, whom he fed some of the food which he had prepared for Christ; and then by a small orphan boy who had no home. The cobbler carried him to his own home to be cared for by his wife, then hurried back to his shop to wait for the Lord. When night came he was disappointed and cried out "Why did you forget that this was the day?"

In the silence he heard a voice telling him that three times God came to his door — once in the form of the beggar; again in the form of the old woman; and last in the form of a child. . . and had found a warm welcome each time.

During the social hour, meeringue puffs filled with strawberry ice cream, cheese straws and coffee were served to Mrs. Woody Marlow, Miss Ola Cooper, Mrs. es.

YOUR PROBLEMS

It's Your Husband Who Should Get Earful

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: The day I married I became a beggar. Not the kind that walks the streets with a tin cup. This is worse. During my 10 years of marriage, whether I stayed at home or worked out, I had to account for every penny that passed my hands. "Why did you make a long distance call? Why did you buy a new broom, the old one was all right. Where's the change from the dollar I gave you for cough medicine?"

Once when I needed a winter coat my husband bought a used one from his sister. It was a lovely coat, and not badly worn, but that was nine years ago and I'm still wearing it.

Our home is shabby. Almost everything needs re-doing. The odd part of it is we aren't hard up for money. We have a good bank account, my husband is well employed and there's no reason for us to live like this.

How does a woman get out of the beggar class after 10 years? How can she regain her dignity? Please tell me.—ASHAMED

You're so articulate when it comes to expressing yourself on paper, too bad you're incapable of uttering these words to your husband, who SHOULD be getting the earful.

No woman (or man) should have to beg his mate for money. Marriage is a partnership. Women who work and hand over their paychecks, then plead for a hand-out are fools. Men who give The Little Woman every dime, then beg for cigarette money are stupid.

The method of handling the family finances should be discussed before marriage. This isn't mercenary, it's sensible. And it prevents problems later. Money can be more than something with which to pay bills. It can be a club with which to beat a spouse over the head.

Ten years is a long time, but I suggest you sit down with the miser and insist on an allowance as of now. If he refuses, see a lawyer about a separation. Perhaps when he learns he may have to support two households, he'll change his tune.

Dear Ann: How can I get this fellow to stop treating me like a sister? I am 22 and he is 25. We've had a standing date every Saturday night for four and a half months.

I would like to marry this man but how in the world will we ever reach that stage when he can't seem to get up the nerve to kiss me goodnight?

In the theater the other night, during a particularly moving scene, my hand accidentally brushed his. He jumped a foot. I'm sure he thought I was trying to hold hands with him. It was terribly embarrassing.

I'm not the aggressive type but I fear if I don't make some move, this may go down in history as the longest platonic friendship in history. Can you help me? —STONE WALL

Dear Stone Wall: He's the one who needs help—not you. A 25 year old man who has had 8 dates with a girl and "jumps a foot" at the touch of her hand, is no red-hot candidate for marriage.

If this relationship hasn't produced ample voltage in four and a half months to spark a good night kiss, I suspect Lochinvar is not hitting on all cylinders.

Tell him goodbye and good luck and point him in the direction of a head doctor.

Dear Ann: Two years ago my father left my mother to marry never love another daddy". I'm an authority on the subject, because my mother was left a widow at 34, also. I was 13 when a man wanted to marry her. I felt uneasy but it helped when he told me he could never take the place of my real daddy and would never try. He said he'd do everything in his power to be as near a "real daddy" as possible.

He was a wonderful father and friend and I don't know how I could have loved him more. Now that I'm married and away from home I'm so happy knowing my mother has someone with whom to share her life and that she is not lonely.

Woman's Club Has Christmas Banquet

The Christmas banquet at a local restaurant replaced the December meeting of the Carroll Woman's Club.

The banquet table carried out the red and green Christmas colors with styrofoam squares centered with red lighted candles, based with branches of fir and tiny red baubles. For the presidents division of the board there was a huge tapered candle with larger baubles and branches of fir.

The place cards were placed before angelic choir members in red robes, and silver halos. Mrs. Van Beasy, club president, welcomed the members and their guests, who were their husbands. The Rev. George D. York, pastor of the First Methodist church and guest speaker, gave the invocation for the delectable turkey dinner.

Mrs. W. J. Erwin, program leader for the month, gave a resume of the organization and growth of the Carroll Woman's club, which was the first federated club of rural women. Three charter members were presented silver trays for 32 years of membership: Mrs. W. B. R. Mitchell and Mrs. J. E. Peeler were present for the presentation, but Mrs. J. Grady Wyle, Sr., a charter member and the club's organizer, unable to attend due to hospitalization, was sent a tray. Mrs. R. K. Howard, with 28 years of membership, was presented a bread tray.

The Rev. York, with xylophone of his own handiwork, pleased with a number of the best known Christmas carols, giving the background or historical era or reason for each number played.

There was the exchange of

Martha Sunday School Class Holds Banquet

Martha Sunday School Class of the First Baptist Church, West Monroe, held their Christmas banquet in the Banquet Hall at the church.

Mrs. Carey Holmes, social chairman, assisted by the class members decorated the hall in an array of Christmas scenes. The tables were aglow with candlelight, red berries, greenery and silvered Magnolia leaves. At one end of the room was a gaily decorated Christmas tree with gifts for the members to exchange.

Mrs. J. C. Hargrove gave the invocation and dinner was enjoyed with a background of musical chimes coming from under the glittering tree.

Mrs. Geneva Alexander, program chairman introduced Miss Linda Garrett, a guest, who gave a Christmas Reading, "Jest for Christmas" by Eugene Fields. Her clever presentation was enjoyed to the utmost by each one present. Other points of interest on the program was movies of the previous socials and they were shown by Mrs. Holmes. Mrs. Pearl Thompson had charge of the distribution of the gifts. Conclusion of the lovely program was the singing of Christmas Carols by the group accompanied by Mrs. Vaughn Watson.

A LIVIN' DOLL

RACINE, Wis. (UPI) — Warren David got just what he wanted for Christmas. But he had to take it back, anyhow.

He jokingly told his wife he wanted a blonde doll for Christmas. She obligingly placed the order in a request container at a department store.

Christmas Eve, David's package — a giant ribbon — adorned box — arrived. When he opened it, out stepped a blonde, 5 feet, 2 inches tall, measuring 38-24-36.

Mrs. David insisted he exchange the "doll" for another item.

Woman's Club Has Christmas Banquet

The Christmas banquet at a local restaurant replaced the December meeting of the Carroll Woman's Club.

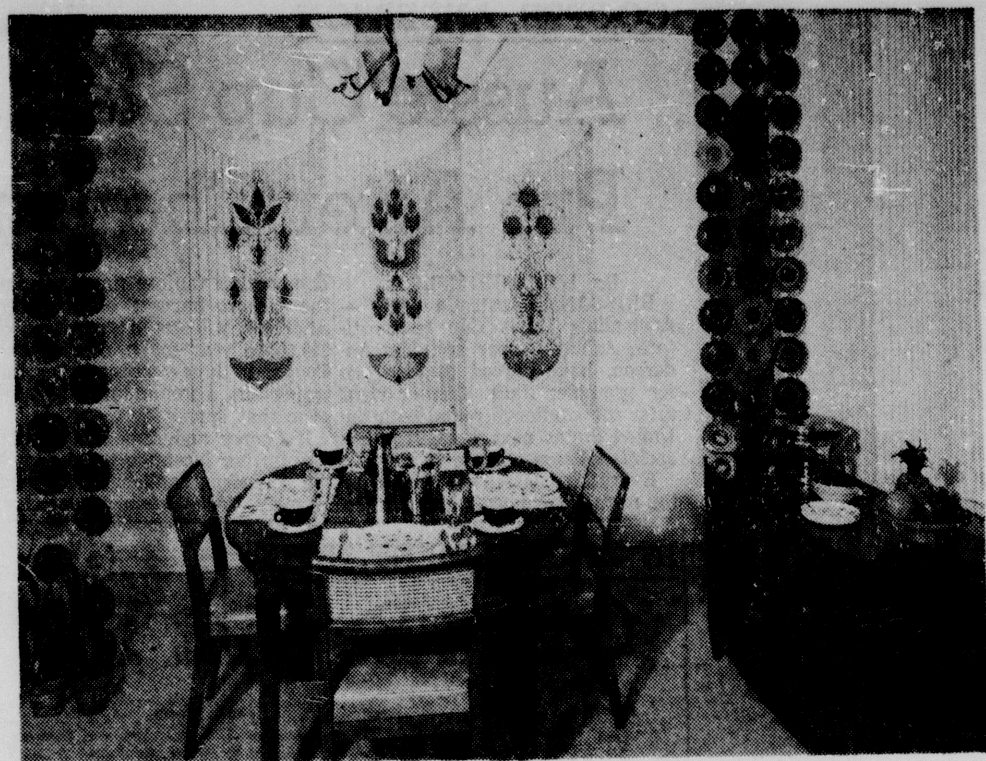

The banquet table carried out the red and green Christmas colors with styrofoam squares centered with red lighted candles, based with branches of fir and tiny red baubles. For the presidents division of the board there was a huge tapered candle with larger baubles and branches of fir.

The place cards were placed before angelic choir members in red robes, and silver halos. Mrs. Van Beasy, club president, welcomed the members and their guests, who were their husbands. The Rev. George D. York, pastor of the First Methodist church and guest speaker, gave the invocation for the delectable turkey dinner.

Mrs. W. J. Erwin, program leader for the month, gave a resume of the organization and growth of the Carroll Woman's club, which was the first federated club of rural women. Three silver trays for 32 years of membership: Mrs. W. B. R. Mitchell and Mrs. J. E. Peeler were presented for the presentation, but Mrs. J. Grady Wyly, Sr., a charter member and the club's organizer, unable to attend due to hospitalization, was sent a tray. Mrs. R. K. Howard, with 28 years of membership, was presented a bread tray.

The Rev. York, with xylophone of his own handiwork, pleased with a number of the best known Christmas carols, giving the background or historical era or reason for each number played.

There was the exchange of is covered with plain striped paper that matches the background. The unusual room divider on the right conceals the kitchen door and is made up of flat, colorful glass disks strung together on metal clips.

Martha Sunday School Class Holds Banquet

Gifts with Mrs. Beasy and Mrs. Herzog making the presentations. Guests for the banquet and delightful program were Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Amacker, Mr. and Mrs. Van Beasy, Miss Elizabeth Cammack, Miss Valera Cammack, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Erwin, Mrs. Charles W. Edwards, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Herzog, Miss Eunyce Howard, Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Howard, Mrs. H. H. Moorman, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Ragus, Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Reed, Mrs. J. E. Peeler, Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Van Fossen and the Rev. and Mrs. George D. York.

Martha Sunday School Class of the First Baptist Church, West Monroe, held their Christmas banquet in the Banquet Hall at the church.

Mrs. Carey Holmes, social chairman, assisted by the class members decorated the hall in an array of Christmas scenes. The tables were aglow with candlelight, red berries, greenery and silvered Magnolia leaves. At one end of the room was a gaily decorated Christmas tree with gifts for the members to exchange.

Mrs. J. C. Hargrove gave the invocation and dinner was enjoyed with a background of musical chimes coming from under the glittering tree.

Mrs. Geneva Alexander, program chairman introduced Miss Linda Garrett, a guest, who gave a Christmas Reading, "Jest for Christmas" by Eugene Fields. Her clever presentation was enjoyed to the utmost by each one present. Other points of interest on the program was movies of the previous socials and they were shown by Mrs. Holmes. Mrs. Pearl Thompson had charge of the distribution of the gifts. Conclusion of the lovely program was the singing of Christmas Carols by the group accompanied by Mrs. Vaughn Watson.

A LIVIN' DOLL

RACINE, Wis. (UPI)—Warren David got just what he wanted for Christmas. But he had to take it back, jokingly.

He jokingly told his wife he wanted a blonde doll for Christmas. She obligingly placed the order in a request container at a department store.

Christmas Eve, David's package—a giant ribbon-adorned box—arrived. When he opened it, out stepped a blonde, 5 feet, 2 inches tall, measuring 38-24-36.

Mrs. David insisted he exchange the "doll" for another item.

TO SPEND WEEK AT FARM

Ike Working On Annual Message

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (UPI)—President Eisenhower settled down on a glassed-in porch overlooking his frozen farm here late Friday for leisurely composition of his annual State of the Union message to Congress.

The Chief Executive and his wife, with their 10-year-old grandson, David, bunched around in the rear of a stately limousine, motored from Washington to their farm for a stay of a week or more.

The President reached the farm at 3:50 p.m. and a short time later, was working alone on his heated porch, scanning and revising a preliminary draft of the message which will outline his 1959 legislative program for the Democratic-controlled Congress.

The President also brought along a preliminary draft of the message to accompany his balanced 77-billion-dollar budget for fiscal 1960.

The two messages will dominate much of the President's working time while he enjoys the Christmas and New Year holidays on his farm.

Dates for the President's delivery of the State of the Union message and sending of the budget to the new Congress will be announced shortly.

Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said the President wanted to stay at the farm until sometime after Jan. 1, possibly through the following weekend.

Eisenhower is scheduled to discuss foreign and defense programs with both Democratic and Republican congressional leaders at the annual bipartisan White House conference Jan. 5.

The President and Mrs. Eisenhower observed Christmas quietly at the White House Thursday by exchanging gifts and sharing turkey dinner with their family.

They held the traditional dinner with their son, Maj. John Eisenhower, his wife, Barbara, and their four children. A 42-pound turkey which the President received as a gift provided the main course.

ASKED TO GET CLEARANCE—BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI)—California's Gov.-elect Edmund G. Brown has been asked to get security clearance from the FBI or the Pentagon.

The request was made by the State University Board of Regents, of which Brown will be ex-officio president when he takes office. An official of the board explained that the University is engaged in secret work for the government, and the regents sometimes visit secret U. S. installations.

Northeast's Rowan Named Gulf States Coach Of Year

LAKE CHARLES, La. (UPI) — A man who has made a career of coaching Bayou country football squads has been named the Gulf States Conference "Coach of the Year" in this his first year in the conference.

Jack Cameron Rowan, the old West Virginia Mountaineer, who came to Northeast State College too late for Spring practice this year, won the honor by a landslide vote. He was named on 19 of the 27 ballots cast, Jack Clayton, of Northwestern State, was runner-up, in the poll conducted by the Louisiana Sports Writers Association.

Rowan came to Northeast under difficult circumstances. He was not appointed to the post until July, too late to hold a strong training session. He came to a campus saddened by the death of Devonne Payne, his predecessor at the Northeast helm. He had little time to prepare for the coming season, less time to spare for recruiting purposes.

He inherited a squad with a strong corps of capable, experienced players, but was short on

PRO-TYPE GAME

North, South In All-Star Contest

By WHITNEY MARTIN
MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Miami citizens and visitors will get a look at pro type football played by amateurs in the Orange Bowl Saturday night when the North and the South All-Stars clash in a game for the benefit of the Shrine children's hospitals.

Upwards of 35,000 fans are expected to view this 11th renewal of the annual classic—the 13th if two previous high school games are included and a thrilling contest can be expected if the games of recent years are any indication. The North squeezed out a 23-20 victory last year.

Both squads are loaded with talent which pro scouts have been eyeing with more than casual interest, so there is no way to get a line of the probable winner.

The North, coached by Northwestern's Ara Parseghian, and the South, with Darrell Royal of Texas in charge, have been working daily the past week and each squad has blended into an amazingly smooth machine considering the brief practice.

Each has its outstanding stars, and observers believe the game will develop as a duel between the North's running attack and the South's passing offense.

The North offense will be spearheaded by the Army's great Pete Dawkins, a hard-running, speedy and shifty halfback who also rates as a fine pass receiver and defensive man. He also is a south-paw passer of fair ability.

The South, Royal hinted, will put its faith in the arm of Buddy Humphrey of Baylor, one of the nation's top passers, and it also will have one of the best punters available in Billy Stacy of Mississippi.

The probable offensive line-ups: North: Le. Gary Prahst, Michigan; Lt. Bob Wetoska, Notre Dame; Lg. Ed Michaels, Pittsburgh; C. Dan James, Ohio State; Rg. Jim Schaaf, Notre Dame; Rt. Dick Schafrauth, Ohio State; Re. Dick Barker, Michigan State; Qb. Al Jacobs, Penn State; Lh. Joe Morrison, Cincinnati; Rh. Pete Dawkins, Army; Harry Walters, Army.

South: Le. Bob Bryant, Texas; Lt. Phil Blazer, North Carolina; Lg. Fred Swearingen, North Carolina; C. Arlis Parkhurst, Texas; Rg. George Fritzinger, Navy; Rt. Ray Dye, Georgia; Re. Bill Poole, Miami; Qb. Buddy Humphrey, Baylor; Lh. Bobby Renn, Florida State; Rh. Harold Lewis, Houston; Fb. Don Brown, Houston.

Kickoff is 8:15 p. m., EST.

Celtics Place Gene Conley On Reserve

DETROIT (AP)—Boston Celtics Coach Red Auerbach Friday night put big Gene Conley on the basketball squad's reserve list.

Auerbach explained that the 6-8 Conley, pitcher for the National League champion Milwaukee Braves, is the 11th player for the Celtics but will remain with the club.

Auerbach said Conley will not dress for games but will work out with the other players and is being kept as a spare in the event a regular is hurt.

The coach of the National Basketball Assn. squad said he was going to keep all five small players but if the experiment does not work out he will press Conley back into service and swap one of the five for him.

20 Area Clubs Enter Annual Block Meet

JONESVILLE, La. (Special) — Twenty area teams so far have entered the annual block (Jonesville) High School basketball tournament to be held on January 8, 9 and 10.

Those entered in the boys' division are: Larto; Enterprise, defending champions; Sicily Island; Harrisonburg; Block; Vidalia; Newellton; LaSalle; Monterey and Waterproof.

In the girls' division the following teams have entered the annual tournament: Larto; Enterprise; Sicily Island; Harrisonburg; Block; Vidalia; Newellton; Ozden, defending champions; Monterey and Waterproof.

A first place trophy will be awarded the champions in both the girls and boys divisions.

A second place trophy will also be awarded to the second place winners in both divisions.

A team sportsmanship trophy will be awarded to both boys and girls teams.

An all tournament team trophy will be awarded in both the boys and girls divisions.

Deadline for entering the tournament has been set for Saturday, Jan. 3. Those schools still interested in entering may do so by calling Jonesville 7193 or 4671. It was announced by officials of the annual Block Tourney.

SMU Whips Arkansas In SW Tourney

HOUSTON (AP) — Southern Methodist, paced by Carter Crech 6-foot-2 junior from Troy, Mo., beat off a late Arkansas comeback Friday to edge the Razorbacks, 65-64, in the first round of the Southwest Conference basketball tournament.

Texas Christian, the defending champion and pre-tournament favorite, had to score 14 points in the last 3½ minutes to come from behind and defeat Baylor 62-55.

Night pairings placed Rice against Texas and Texas Tech against Texas A & M.

More than 4,200 fans, the largest afternoon crowd in the history of the 8-year-old tournament, saw Crech hit four baskets in the five minutes of the second half to give SMU a 46-43 edge after the Mustangs had trailed Arkansas practically all the way.

A goal by Jay Carpenter gave Arkansas a 51-51 tie but another Crech basket left the Mustangs in front, 53-51. Two quick goals by Pat Foster gave the Porks their final lead, 55-53.

Max Williams sent the Mustangs ahead to stay, 58-55, with two jump shots and a free throw.

The Mustangs clung to their three-point margin until Bryce Sneed, a sophomore forward, sank a crisp shot with 42 seconds to play. Nash hit a pair of free throws as Arkansas fouled while trying to stop the Mustang stall and SMU had a 65-62 edge with 21 seconds remaining.

Arkansas' final points came on a long jump shot by another sophomore, Clyde Rhoden.

most continued spirited action, and the pattern was the same. Hart stalking, throwing long left hooks and occasional rights; Dupas circling, dancing, juggling, forever on the move.

Dupas when hit hardest and seemingly in trouble would fight back with ferocity, sometimes to his disadvantage. He would dart in and try to crank Hart's punching room, but Hart, apparently the stronger of the two, often would break away to land cleanly.

Hart Scores Decision Over Ralph Dupas

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Garnet (Sugar) Hart of Philadelphia won a split decision over Ralph Dupas of New Orleans in a slam-bang 10-round nationally televised battle at the Miami Beach Auditorium Friday night.

Hart weighed 144½ pounds and Dupas 143½. There were no knockdowns.

Referee Jimmy Peerless had Dupas in front, 98-97, Judge Gus Jacobson voted for Hart, 96-95, and Judge Stu Winston had the Philadelphia in front, 97-94.

It was a stalking, deadly puncher against a darting, zig-zagging perpetual motion machine reminiscent of Willie Pep in his hey day, and it was the stouter punching of Hart which brought him the victory.

Hart invariably came out best in the exchanges, except for the final round, when Dupas kept on top.

The 23-year-old New Orleans youngster, veteran of 90 fights, showed a concrete chin in weathering wicked rights and left hooks. Few rounds were without al-bench strength. Despite his handicaps, Rowan put a team on the field that won the respect of every team it met.

The Indians won their first six games, and met defeat in conference play only at the hands of the loop's two co-champions—Northwestern and Louisiana Tech.

The 1958 season was Rowan's first as a head coach at the college level, but he began his coaching career back in 1935 at Mullens high school in Mullens, W. Va.

Rowan joined the Mullens staff as an assistant in 1935 and became head coach in 1939. He was head man for three years, during which time his teams won 26 games, and lost one.

Then came World War II and Rowan became a commander in the Naval reserve, serving from April, 1942, to February, 1946. He served as communications and personnel officer, and also had among his duties welfare and recreation work.

After he was discharged, Rowan became head coach at Byrd high school in Shreveport, a post he held until 1955. During that 10-year stretch, his teams won 68 games and lost 41. His 1949 team won the state championship, and his 1953 outfit was runner-up.

In 1955, he retired from the coaching profession, and entered the insurance business. The lure of the gridiron proved to be too strong, though, and in 1957 he returned to the ranks of active coaches, taking the post of backfield coach at Northwestern State under Jack Clayton. He held that post when he was appointed head man at Northeast.

Church Paper Blasts Firing Of ND Coach

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—The Indiana Catholic and Record, official newspaper of the Indianapolis Archdiocese, expressed sympathy with Terry Brennan Friday on his discharge as Notre Dame football coach.

The editorial, titled "Tears for N.D.," added:

"But we sympathize even more with the people at Notre Dame who were trying to bring academic prestige to that institution.

"They are the ones that really lost when the win-every-Saturday alumni and supporters pressured Brennan out of his job. Terry is a bright young man with a law degree and coach-of-the-year laurels stuck in his pocket. He'll find a way to make a real good living, we don't doubt. And he'll have a lot more fun than he's been having at South Bend lately."

The editorial said the real losers were "the priests and laymen at Notre Dame who were trying, successfully, we believe, to remake the public image of Notre Dame from football factory to first-class university."

"How will they ease the suspicion that a lot of Notre Dame supporters — including some wealthy donors — don't care whether classes are held or not, just so N.D. wins on Saturday. No other department at Notre Dame — or any other college — is held to the standard of national champs every year."

The church paper said, "A lot of people will suspect that ex-coach Brennan was right. You can't field consistently great teams, sprinkled with All-Americans, if you're going to insist on rigid academic standards at the same time. Hiring a pro coach is not the full answer. You need players too."

The editorial concluded: "Anyone for tennis? Pro tennis, that is."

Frank, Boozar Lead K-State Over Tigers

KANSAS CITY (AP)—The Kansas State Wildcats, with big boys Wally Frank and Bob Boozar mastering the boards, both on offense and defense, defeated Missouri's Tigers 69-66 in the opening game of the Big Eight basketball tournament Friday night.

Kansas City added Big Eight b73 Oklahoma met Iowa State in the other first round game.

Frank, a 6-foot-8 junior, carried the scoring load for K-State after Boozar, also 6-8, fouled out with six minutes remaining.

Frank had 23 points, one more than Boozar.

It was the seventh victory against one defeat for Kansas State, the nation's No. 4 team, and the sixth loss in nine starts for Missouri.

Kansas State was off to a 9-1 lead before the Tigers got a bucket, and the Wildcats were ahead 30-21 at halftime.

Missouri kept plugging away but wasn't able to make much of a ripple until Boozar fouled out.

The Tigers, with Shorty Kirksey, furnishing the spark, narrowing their handicap to four points several times, but couldn't pull any closer.

Kirksey and Charles Henke paced the Tigers with 16 points.

TO TURN PRO — Australian tennis stars Ashley Cooper (left), 22, and Mal Anderson, 23, have agreed to turn pro after the Davis Cup challenge round with the United States, the Associated Press learned in Brisbane, Australia, yesterday. Northeast Signs Three Prospects Northeast has signed three of north Louisiana's most outstanding high school football stars, two of them members of Holly Ridge's state class B runner-up team, to athletic scholarships, the athletic department announced yesterday.

Northeast athletic director and head football coach Jack Rowan signed Marvin McManus, Holly Ridge's star fullback, late this week. Signed earlier were Wayne Reddick, outstanding Holly Ridge tackle, and Delhi's stellar guard, Garland Kyle.

Northeast inked two members of Neville's state class AA runnerup team, tackle Ross Nolan and halfback Gene Howard, last Saturday.

McManus, a 6-2, 195-pounder, also made all district for district 2-B and a prime candidate for all-state, was Holly Ridge's leading ground gainer. The 185-pound fullback gained over 1,000 yards rushing in regular season play and scored 62 points.

Reddick, a 6-2, 195-pounder, also made all district for the second year in a row and was the leading figure in the fine Holly Ridge line that gave up an average of less than a touchdown per game.

Kyle, 5-10 and 175 pounds, made the Louisiana Sports Writers all-district 2-A team. In 1957, when Delhi competed in class B and won the state championship, Kyle made the district 2-B all-star team.

ATHLETE OF YEAR

Althea Gibson Is Top Female Star

By BOB THOMAS
LOS ANGELES (AP)—How does Althea Gibson take her selection as Associated Press female athlete of the year? The same way she took the U. S. and Wimbledon tennis championships—coolly and in stride.

Nothing seems to faze the tall, supple Althea, and therein may lie her greatness as a sports champion. In Hollywood, she received the news of her victory in the year-end poll on the movie set where she is making her debut as an actress.

"I'm honored," she replied calmly, adding she also won last year.

She did indeed. She became the first consecutive winner since another tennis flash, Maureen Connolly, headed the poll 1951-52-53. Other multiple winners were net star Alice Marble (1939-40) and golf great Babe Didrikson Zahariis (1945-47).

This year Althea scored 133 first-place votes on 202 ballots. She far outpaced Carol Heiss, 18-year-old world figure skating champion of New York, who was second in the poll with 21 first-place votes.

This could be Althea's last year as a poll winner. Then again, it might not be.

"When I retired this year, I left the door open," she remarked. "I still might go back to tournament tennis. It depends on how my other careers go."

The former Harlem tomboy has three new careers: As writer (an autobiography), singer (record album) and actress. She came to Hollywood to appear as a faithful slave in a Civil War drama, "The

COOPER, ANDERSON

Aussie Cup Stars To Turn Pro After Challenge Sets

By WILL GRIMSLEY
BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — Australia's Davis Cup tennis titans, Ashley Cooper and Mal Anderson, have agreed to turn pro after the challenge round with the United States next week, The Associated Press learned Friday.

Everything is all set except for the formal signings, which will be done with a fanfare timed to reap the richest harvest of publicity.

Anderson will get a guarantee of $20,000 a year for two years and Cooper a three-year pact guaranteeing him a minimum of $100,000 over that span.

If Cooper and Anderson needed any further incentive to beat back the American challenge here next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, this cash lure will provide it. A decisive victory would lessen the returns.

Both Cooper, 22, and Anderson, 23, are close to top form right now. They already have been handed the singles assignments by Captain Harry Hopman.

Meanwhile, the American camp was beset with frayed nerves as Captain Perry Jones continued to delay selection of his singles players. Jones has to decide among Ham Richardson, Alex Olmedo and Barry MacKay. All three are eager for the tough assignments.

Both Cooper and Anderson have a chance to make more money under percentage deals. Anderson, who will sign his pro contract with Kramer on Jan. 1, will work on a 15 per cent of the gate basis.

Cooper, the prize of the package because of his triple slam of the Australian, Wimbledon and U. S. championships, will get a 20 per cent slice of the gates.

This will put the tall Aussie in the same bracket with Pancho Gonzales, the pro champion from Los Angeles. Pancho is the only other player in Kramer's troupe collecting 20 per cent.

All others, including Lew Had and Ken Rosewall, the former Australian Davis Cup standard-bearers, and Tony Trabert of Cincinnati, swing a racket for 15 per cent of the turnstile clicks.

Cooper is to be married Jan. 2 to Helen Wood, a former Miss Australia. He will then take a brief honeymoon. He will make his first appearance as a pro in the Jack Crawford benefit Jan. 6 in Sydney. For this, his pro debut, he will play for free.

When the news of Kramer's latest raid on Australia's Cup talent is broadcast here, there is going to be plenty of fuss.

Kramer, of Los Angeles, had been expected to lure the two into the fold, but the realization is going to put him further under attack. He is having enough trouble with the lawn tennis brass as it is. They recently refused to rent him any courts for his pro tour.

The American players, however, had a big enough problem of their own without concerning themselves with the Aussie situation.

"U. S. Davis Cup Edgy," read a prominent black-faced headline in an afternoon Brisbane paper, and that told only part of the story.

The three American singles candidates have been so busy trying to beat each other they have had little opportunity to point for the opposition.

"I am confident we can beat the Australians, but I fear we may be hurting ourselves in failing to get mentally set for them," said Richardson, the veteran from Arlington, Va., who is America's No. 1 player. "I would feel much better if I knew I was going to play."

MacKay, from Dayton, Ohio, and Olmedo, the Peruvian from Southern California, have shown signs of edginess.

"Well, what do you hear? Who's going to play?" Are the questions being bantered around.

Jones, who said he may not make a final decision until the draw at 5 p. m. Sunday, is disturbed over these tensions. "I want my team to be edgy," he said. "These boys came down here ready and eager to play, no matter when they are called upon."

The U. S. situation appeared unchanged after a double session workout Friday.

Richardson, who insists he is playing the best tennis of his career, won acts from Earl Bucholz of St. Louis and Olmedo 3-5 in a set during the afternoon. MacKay was hitting his ground strokes exceptionally well and showing good form. Olmedo had his shots clicking in the afternoon and served powerfully.

workout Friday.

Incensed Fans Riot At South Africa Track

DURBAN, South Africa (UPI)—Hundreds of track-and-field fans tossed bottles, sticks and stones at the horses and judges Friday in an hour-long protest riot over the way a race was run.

Two jockeys, including top rider Basil Lewis, were injured, and at least three valuable horses were hurt in the demonstration. No injuries were reported among the fans or judges.

Riot squads were hard-pressed to quell the screaming fans who tore up fence posts in their anger at the judges. The riot was touched off when four horses apparently suffered interference at the start of the eighth race.

Fans yelled "foul," stormed the judges' stand and demanded that the race be re-run. The judges refused.

As the horses came down the final stretch in the ninth race, the crowd began throwing bottles, sticks and stones at the riders and horses. During the ensuing riot, the spectators hurled all kinds of objects at the judges' stand and grandstand office.

The judges refused to comment. Police declined to reveal the number of arrests made.

IN TOURNAMENT HERE

Okla. Baptist To Enter Good Team

Oklahoma Baptist University, despite a so-so (3-4) record, will probably rate the favorite's nod in Northeast's first annual Christmas Basketball Tournament Monday and Tuesday nights at the Ouachita Junior High gym.

The Baptists, Lenny Fant's host Northeast club, Lamar Tech and Northeast Oklahoma will compete in the two-day tournament. Oklahoma Baptist will meet Lamar Tech in the first game Monday night at 7:30 and Northeast Louisiana plays Northeast Oklahoma in the night's second game. The winners play the next night for the championship and the loser clash in a consolation tilt.

Bob Bass' Oklahoma Baptist team has five of eight letterman returning from last year's team, the greatest in the school's history. The Bisons won 19 and lost eight last season and won the NAIA district 9 championship and ranked 14th nationally on defense among NAIA teams.

In 1958, the Baptists have lost to Wayland (Texas) College, North Texas State of the Missouri Valley Conference, Hardin-Simmons of the Border loop and Eastern New Mexico.

However, the Bisons have won their last two in a row and three overall. They took an early season decision over Benedictine of Tulsa and whipped College of Emporia (Kansas) and Emporia State in their last two games.

Buddy Pitzer is OBU's leading scorer for the season with a 13-point per game average with Jerry "Beast" Lester, 6-6 center, right behind with a 12.8 average. Lester was a near-unanimous choice for the Oklahoma Collegiate Conference all-star team last season and was second in loop scoring with an 18.8 average. The rest of the starting lineup will consist of 5-10 Don Masters, Bill Rousey and 6-3 junior college transfer Gerald Hertzler.

LEADING SCORER — Buddy Pitzer is the leading scorer for Oklahoma Baptist with an average of 13 points per game. Oklahoma Baptist plays here Monday and Tuesday in the first annual Christmas Tournament.

Navy Shifting To Larger Stadiums

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP)—Navy out that Navy already plays Penn and Army in Philadelphia and game, a Nov. 7 clash with Maryland, out of Baltimore's Memorial Stadium in the face of dwindling gate receipts. And officials are deliberating whether to transfer the 1960 Notre Dame game also.

Capt. Slade Cutter, Naval Academy director of athletics, said Friday the Maryland game will be played instead in the new Navy-Marine Corps Memorial Stadium here.

He said no decision has been reached on whether to transfer the 1956 Notre Dame game to Philadelphia's huge Memorial Stadium, which seats 40,000 more than the 57,000 accommodated in Baltimore.

The Philadelphia Bulletin reported earlier Friday that Municipal Stadium there had been offered to the academy for a rental of $10,000, the same fee charged for the Army-Navy game, and that Navy officials found the offer "very attractive."

The Navy-Notre Dame game has been a biennial attraction in Baltimore for many years and was a sellout a month in advance this year. The Maryland game, not as strong an attraction because of Maryland's poor record this season and following by only a week the Notre Dame game and a sellout professional game, drew only 18,000.

"We would much rather play the (Notre Dame) game in Baltimore if we can make ends meet financially," Cutter said, pointing out that Navy already plays Penn and Army in Philadelphia and game, a Nov. 7 clash with Maryland, out of Baltimore's Memorial Stadium in the face of dwindling gate receipts. And officials are deliberating whether to transfer the 1960 Notre Dame game also.

Cutter said playing the lesser gate attractions here, instead of Baltimore, is no reflection on Baltimore fans or indicative of a lack of support for Navy. He said the caliber of the games could not be expected to draw well in the face of heavy competition from pro football.

The Baltimore Colts play before capacity crowds all season. Navy earlier had switched an Oct. 10 date at Syracuse next year from Baltimore to the Oyster Bowl at Norfolk, Va. The 1959 Notre Dame game was not scheduled for Baltimore.

Calhoun Cagers

Take Two From Huttig Visitors

CALHOUN, La. (Special) — Scotie Sims scored 27 points to pace Calhoun boys to a 68-57 verdict over Huttig, Ark., after outstanding defensive play by six guards paved the way for a 54-29 victory for Calhoun girls in the opener of a cage twin bill here last night.

Jerry Auds scored 16 points and played an outstanding floor game and Spike Smith contributed 13 points to aid in the boys victory while Nelson's 23 and Kitchens' 17 paced Huttig.

Lorena White, Bobbie Hale, Billie Jean Hogan, Joanne Gross, Peggy Finley and Ann Woodward turned in fine work at guard for Calhoun girls while Joyce Baker tallied 21 points and Joyce Saxon counted 14 to lead in the offensive department. Farr scored 14 points for Huttig.

Rodgers Sparks

Philadelphia To 106-93 Decision

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP)—Rookie Guy Rodgers, scoring 28 points, staged one of the greatest all-around performances in National Basketball Assn. play Friday night as he led the Philadelphia Warriors to a 106-93 victory over New York's Knickerbockers at the Hershey Arena.

'COLTS TOO POWERFUL'

NY May Use Wide Open Tactics Against Baltimore

By EARL WRIGHT
NEW YORK (UPI)—Coach Jim Lee Howell said Friday his New York Giants might switch to a wide-open offensive game for their Sunday clash with the Baltimore Colts for the National Football League championship.

"The Colts score a lot of points. We may be forced to do more passing than usual to try to keep up with them," Howell said as he put his players through their last extended drill.

If Howell does order his offensive unit to take more chances, the 70,000 spectators at Yankee Stadium and hundreds of thousands of television (NBC) viewers across the country (except in New York area where TV will be blacked out) might see a high-scoring contest because Coach Weeb Ewbank's Colts averaged almost 32 points a game this year.

But although Howell talked about putting more zing in New York's low-scoring offense, it was evident that defense still represented his big hope for a second NFL title in the last three years. The defensive unit hauled the Giants to the Eastern Division title although the club averaged less than 20 points a game.

New York's defensive platoon set up all the scoring plays in a 13-10 victory over the Cleveland Browns, forcing a division playoff with that club. It then shut out the Browns, the league's third highest-scoring team this year, 10-0, to clinch Eastern honors for the Giants.

Howell's defensive platoon has given him one big worry this week. Roosevelt Grier, 280-pound left defensive tackle, came out of last Sunday's game with the Browns with knee and arm injuries. Howell said it would be a "heavy blow" if Grier cannot play Sunday or cannot go all-out if he does play.

Baltimore is a 3 1/2 point favorite to win its first NFL title Sunday because it has a well-balanced team that led the league in scoring and allowed fewer points than any club except New York.

The odds-makers apparently are not impressed by New York's unprecedented three triumphs over Cleveland this season, the club's earlier victory over Baltimore and the fact that it swept its last five starts with a combination composed mainly of luck and sheer guts.

John Unitas and L. G. Duple, two of Baltimore's offensive stars, did not play in the club's first game with New York this season because of injuries. Unitas generally is considered the league's top active quarterback while Duple is an excellent halfback.

Unitas is a daring and consistently accurate passer. He has thrown at least one touchdown pass in each of his last 25 games, an all-time NFL mark.

Charley Conerly, 38, oldest active player in the league, figures to play most of the way at quarterback for the Giants although they have another experienced signal caller in Don Heinrich.

But defense figures to decide the issue as it has all recent title games. Besides Grier, the key men on New York's defensive line are Andy Robustelli, Jim Katcavage and Dick Modzelewski. Grier, described by Howell as the "league's best defensive end," leads the Baltimore defense. Art Donovan, Gene Lipscomb and Don Joyce team with Marchetti on the line and helped the Colts clinch Western Division honors two weeks before the season ended.

The players in the game get 63 per cent of the net receipts. With a record game of well over $500,000 in prospect, each member of the winning team could collect nearly $3,000 and each losing player about $2,000.

It was cold in New York this week with the temperature falling below 20 but fair and milder weather with temperature in the high 30s or low 40s was forecast for Sunday.

Sooners Hold Brisk Drills Despite Rain

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—A steady drizzle failed to stop the Oklahoma Sooners Friday in their preparation for their Orange Bowl meeting with Syracuse New Year's Day.

The Oklahoma Sooners, who arrived in two chartered planes Thursday night, worked out in the morning also, so anxious is Coach Bud Wilkinson to get rid of any rust his athletes might have accumulated during their week's vacation.

Wilkinson and his aides put the squad through a variety of drills pointed toward speeding up reactions. There was a minimum of body contact work.

There were two changes in the starting team as originally listed. Jackie Sanfey was at left half and Jerry Payne was at left guard. Jerry Thompson, the regular left guard, still has a sore chest from being dumped from a truck in a hunting accident, and how much, if any, he can play is problematical.

Wilkinson said there was no significance in replacing left half Jim Carpenter by Sanfey. Sanfey ordinarily is on the alternate unit, and there apparently is little to choose between the two teams.

"I try to keep them as evenly balanced as possible," Wilkinson explained. The starting team has scored only one more touchdown than the so-called second team.

Bob Cornell is running at quarterback on the first unit, replacing Dave Baker, ruled scholastically ineligible. Baker was an outstanding defensive man, and in the 1958 Orange Bowl game he passed for one touchdown and scored two others. He also was the punter and kicked points after touchdowns.

Cornell, who has been on the third unit, has the call right now over Bobby Boyd because of his punting ability.

Wilkinson plans two workouts daily for his squad.

OFFENSE VS. DEFENSE

Ole Miss Meets Florida In 14th Gator Bowl Classic

By TED SMITS
JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP)—Mississippi's big offense collides with Florida's case-hardened defense in the 14th annual Gator Bowl football game Saturday.

Mississippi is favored by six points.

Through the 10-game 1958 season, the Mississippi Rebels led the Southeastern Conference in rushing yardage and spiced their attack with an even 1,000 yards passing. The combination resulted in eight victories against two defeats.

Florida's strength was in its line, seventh best nationally in rushing defense. While the Gators' record of six victories, three defeats and one tie is not usually of bowl caliber, it was in two of the losses that Florida gained stature.

STRONG BOTH WAYS

Falcons Employ Many Weapons

By GENE MEAKINS
AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (UPI)—The Air Force Academy Falcons, facing tough Texas Christian University in the Cotton Bowl on New Year's Day, have a lot of football weapons and they know how to use them.

The Falcons employed strong passing, running and kicking and a tough defense to score nine victories and one tie this season, their first in major college competition. The Academy has not yet graduated a class.

They tied Iowa, 13-13, with a balanced running and passing attack. Against Oklahoma State, they took to the air brilliantly to win, 33-29. They remained mainly on the ground to crush Wyoming, 21-6; kicked field goals to edge Utah, 16-14, and Denver, 10-7, and recovered enough fumbles to defeat Colorado, 20-14.

OTHER VICTORIES EASIER
The other victories came easier: 37-6 over Detroit, 36-6 over Colorado State University, 16-0 over Stanford and 43-7 over New Mexico.

On paper, they don't appear strong. The biggest man is 217-pound Brock Strom, an All-American tackle. But they claw at an opponent's weak spots with all their strength, speed and alertness and something usually gives.

Superbly coached by Ben Martin and his staff, the Cadets operate from the winged-T with a man in motion or a flanker. Martin alternates two units and substitutes without fear.

Quarterback is especially strong with Rich Mayo, John Kuenzel and Eddie Rosane, in that order. Mayo played 266 minutes, completed 98 of 174 passes for 1,019 yards and 11 touchdowns — the fourth best passing mark in collegiate football. Kuenzel played 226 minutes and Rosane, 113.

LEAD IN RUSHING
Steve Gallos, a 184-pound fullback from Napa, Calif., led the team in rushing with 527 yards in 116 carries and six touchdowns. Right halfback Mike Quinlan, 170 of Bayport, Minn., scored the most points, 48, and was second in rushing with 405 yards in 88 carries. He scored on several long runs. Phil Lane, the other halfback, gained 279 yards in 65 tries. He weighs 165 pounds and is a native of San Angelo, Tex.

Mayo, only 5-11 and 170 pounds, is an outstanding punter, while reserve halfback George Pupich has kicked five field goals and made 12 of 16 conversions. The Academy went for the two-point conversion 17 times and made it 11 times.

BULWARK OF LINE
Capt. Strom is the bulwark of the line. Other strong men up front are guards Howard Bronson, 185, and Charles Zaleski, 197; center John Gullede, 190, and tackle Dave Phillips, 209.

The ends are strong with Bob Brickey, 185; Tom Jozwiak, 210; Charlie Rodgers, 200, and Sam Hardage, 190. Brockage caught four touchdowns passes and Jozwiak two.

The Falcons are due to assemble in Dallas today. The 44-man squad broke practice last Friday for the Christmas holiday, and should be without injuries for the game.

The Academy isn't overconfident. "That team's pursuit is tremendous," Coach Martin said of TCU. "Especially, I think it's tremendous for so big a team as TCU."

Clemson Club To Leave For Biloxi Today

CLEMSON, S. C. (AP)—Coach Frank Howard and his Clemson squad leave Saturday for their date with LSU's undefeated national champions in the Jan. 1 Sugar Bowl game.

Clemson romped through a brisk two-hour drill to close out the home field phase of pre-game drills. Third string fullback Harold Olson missed the drill because of a troublesome ankle.

The Atlantic Coast Conference champions will leave Greenville at 9 a.m. Saturday for Biloxi, Miss., where four workouts have been scheduled prior to the departure for New Orleans the day before the game.

Forty-seven players, eight coaches, two managers, two trainers, the team physician, sports writers and press aides will make up the traveling party of 71.

Practices at Biloxi's high school stadium will be open to the public. They begin at 3 p.m. The team breaks camp there next Wednesday morning. After a drill in the Sugar Bowl Stadium that afternoon, the team will spend New Year's Eve at nearby Callender Naval Air Station.

Clemson worked on defense and offense Friday. The first three units had half an hour each of offense, with the fourth team furnishing opposition. A 45-minute session on defense ended the day's work.

No. 1 fullback Rudy Hayes and top center Bill Thomas, who missed two workouts before the squad took off for Christmas, were back in action. Olson is expected to be back in full practice in the Biloxi drills.

SHRINE BOWL

East Touchdown Pick Over West

By JACK STEVENSON
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) Plans of the West to go around or over the bulky East defenses Saturday in the annual Shrine football game met with opposition from an outside source Friday—the weather.

Rain fell during the morning, but clearing skies were possible by the 2 p.m. PST, kickoff in Kezar Stadium for this nationally televised (NBC) game.

So the East remained a solid one touchdown favorite, with the men of Coach Duffy Daugherty expected to stay on the ground with a running attack.

On defense, the Easterners boast a forward wall averaging 218 pounds so Coach Jack Curcio of the West has centered his offense plans on forward passing and speed.

A capacity crowd of about 60,000 was expected for this 34th annual charity game for the Shrine Hospital for Crippled Children.

Utah's quarterback Lee Grosscup, an ace passer, was named starting quarterback.

With Grosscup in the starting backfield for the West will be Leon Burton of Arizona State, Colorado's Boyd Dowler, and Baylor's Larry Hickman.

Daugherty's starting backfield on offense will be Michigan's Bob Placek at quarterback, Ohio State's Don Clark at left half, Notre Dame's Nick Pietrosante at fullback and either Dick Haley of Pittsburgh or Tom Lorino of Auburn at right half.

The West lost an ace pass catcher when All-America end Buddy Dial of Rice suffered a sprained ankle in practice.

Starting ends will be Dick Walton of UCLA and Ron Stover of Oregon. At tackles are Bill Lecka of UCLA and Troy Barbee of Stanford, with Oregon's Bob Grottkau and Baylor's Charlie Horton at guard and Stanford's Roch Conklin at center.

The East starters on offense are Jerry Wilson, Auburn, and Tom Franckhauser, Purdue, ends; Fran O'Brien, Michigan State, and Bob Novogratz, Army, tackles; Dan Frank, Ohio State, and Al Eucyer, Notre Dame, guards, and Mike Svendsen, Minnesota, center.

Svendsen and Notre Dame's Bronko Nagurski Jr., a tackle on defense, bring the second generation into this game. Fathers of the two started here in past years.

Collegiate rules are played except that unlimited substitution will be in effect.

Both fullback J. W. Brodnax and All America halfback Billy Cannon, hobbled with minor injuries when LSU ended pre-Christmas work last Saturday, were back at full speed.

TOP SMALL TEAMS

Tangerine Hosts Offensive Show

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP)—Tangerine Bowl officials predict a rash of touchdowns when East Texas State and Missouri Valley match high-powered offenses here Saturday.

Each team averaged better than five touchdowns a game during the season, and neither boasts a particularly notable defense.

Statistics-wise, the teams are evenly matched. Undefeated Missouri Valley outscored eight opponents during the season, 35.6 points to 10.3. The once-beaten Texans outpointed 10 opponents an average of 34.9 to 10.5.

East Texas rates a slight edge over the Vikings because it is a veteran team, including 22 players who saw action in the last Tangerine Bowl, played last Jan. 1. The Lions defeated Mississippi Southern in that one, 10-9.

"East Texas is one of the top small college teams in the country and is well-coached," commented Missouri Valley Coach Volney Ashford, who is directing his ninth Viking bowl team in 11 years. "We've exchanged films with them and they look very good."

"We are concerned with that single wing those Missouri fellows use," said Lion Coach J. V. Sikes. "The single wing is something you don't see much of in Texas football. Missouri Valley not only uses a wing, but one of the strangest wings I've ever seen. The backs line up close to the line of scrimmage and get into a deep squat. Most of their plays run off a spinner and the ball gets a little difficult to follow."

Missouri Valley relies mainly on ground power plays off this unusual wing formation. Ashford expects his attack to be slowed without regular halfback Ken Asbury, who is out with a neck injury.

East Texas maneuvers from the straight T formation with variations. Chief operatives are Quarterback Sam McCord and halfbacks Gary Berry, Dan Malone and Joe Harbour.

Kickoff is set for 2:30 p.m. EST. A crowd of about 9,000 is expected.

Coach Ben Schwartzwalder sent his charges through a moderately heavy body contact drill. Realizing that injuries at this late date would be costly, he told the players to slow down.

Much of the practice was devoted to conditioning. Schwartzwalder said he was fearful the squad may suffer from the higher Florida temperatures.

'COLTS TOO POWERFUL'

NY May Use Wide Open Tactics Against Baltimore

By EARL WRIGHT
NEW YORK (UPI)—Coach Jim Lee Howell said Friday his New York Giants might switch to a wide-open offensive game for their Sunday clash with the Baltimore Colts for the National Football League championship.

"The Colts score a lot of points. We may be forced to do more passing than usual to try to keep up with them," Howell said as he put his players through their last extended drill.

If Howell does order his offensive unit to take more chances, the 70,000 spectators at Yankee Stadium and hundreds of thousands of television (NBC) viewers across the country (except in New York area where TV will be blacked out) might see a high-scoring contest because Coach Weeb Ewbank's Colts averaged almost 32 points a game this year.

Syracuse To End Practice On Home Field

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Syracuse football team again settled down to the practice grind Friday after a Christmas rest and worked on all phases of offense and defense.

Syracuse will end its Raleigh practice sessions Saturday and will leave Sunday for Miami, Fla., where the Orange Bowl game is scheduled for New Year's Day.

Coach Ben Schwartzwalder sent his charges through a moderately heavy body contact drill. Realizing that injuries at this late date would be costly, he told the players to slow down.

3-POINT CHOICE

Rebs Rate Edge In Blue-Gray Tilt

By REX THOMAS
MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Peering through partly sunny skies, the weatherman clung steadfastly Friday to his forecast of rain for Saturday's Blue-Gray football game.

But he promised nearly 60-degree weather for the kickoff at 2 p. m., EST, and said the rainfall may amount to nothing more than a good drizzle.

"Partly cloudy to cloudy and occasional light rain," the forecast read.

The 48 college seniors who'll perform before a nationwide television audience over NBC went through a final workout Friday. They elected Purdue quarterback Bob Spoo and guard Jim Frasier of Wisconsin as co-captains for the North and Auburn tackle Cleve Wester and Georgia fullback Theron Sapp for the Rebels.

Yankee coaches, triumphant only six times in the 19-game series, were encouraged by the likelihood of wet weather even if it isn't a heavy downpour.

The South is counting heavily on a wide-open passing game featuring Virginia Tech's Billy Holclaw, and a wet football isn't easy to throw around.

OFFENSE VS. DEFENSE

Ole Miss Meets Florida In 14th Gator Bowl Classic

By TED SMITS
JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) —

Mississippi's big offense collides with Florida's case-hardened defense in the 14th annual Gator Bowl football game Saturday.

Mississippi is favored by six points.

Through the 10-game 1958 season, the Mississippi Rebels led the Southeastern Conference in rushing yardage and spiced their attack with an even 1,000 yards passing. The combination resulted in eight victories against two defeats.

Florida's strength was in its line, seventh best nationally in rushing defense. While the Gators' record of six victories, three defeats and one tie is not usually of bowl caliber, it was in two of the losses that Florida gained stature.

STRONG BOTH WAYS

Falcons Employ Many Weapons

By GENE MEAKINS
AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (UPI)—The Air Force Academy

Falcons, facing tough Texas Christian University in the Cotton Bowl on New Year's Day, have a lot of football weapons and they know how to use them.

The Falcons employed strong passing, running and kicking and a tough defense to score nine victories and one tie this season, their first in major college competition. The Academy has not yet graduated a class.

They tied Iowa, 13-13, with a balanced running and passing attack. Against Oklahoma State, they took to the air brilliantly to win, 33-29. They remained mainly on the ground to crush Wyoming, 21-6; kicked field goals to edge Utah, 16-14, and Denver, 10-7, and recovered enough fumbles to defeat Colorado, 20-14.

OTHER VICTORIES EASIER
The other victories came easier: 37-6 over Detroit, 36-6 over Colorado State University, 16-0 over Stanford and 45-7 over New Mexico.

On paper, they don't appear strong. The biggest man is 217-pound Brock Strom, an All-America tackle. But they claw at an opponent's weak spots with all their strength, speed and alertness and something usually gives.

Superbly coached by Ben Martin and his staff, the Cadets operate from the winged-T with a man in motion or a flanker, Martin alternates two units and substitutes without fear.

Quarterback is especially strong with Rich Mayo, John Kuenzel and Eddie Rosane, in that order. Mayo played 26 minutes, completed 98 of 174 passes for 1,019 yards and 11 touchdowns — the fourth best passing mark in collegiate football. Kuenzel played 226 minutes and Rosane, 113.

LEADS IN RUSHING
Steve Gallos, a 184-pound fullback from Napa, Calif., led the team in rushing with 527 yards in 116 carries and six touchdowns. Right halfback Mike Quinlan, 170 of Bayport, Minn., scored the most points, 48, and was second in rushing with 405 yards in 80 carries. He scored on several long runs: Phil Lane, the other halfback, gained 279 yards in 65 tries. He weighs 165 pounds and is a native of San Angelo, Tex.

Mayo, only 5-11 and 170 pounds, is an outstanding punter, while reserve halfback George Pupich has kicked five field goals and made 12 of 16 conversions. The Academy went for the two-point conversion 17 times and made it 11 times.

BULWARK OF LINE
Capt. Strom is the bulwark of the line. Other strong men up front are guards Howard Bronson, 185, and Charles Zaleski, 197; center John Gullede, 190, and tackle Dave Phillips, 209.

The ends are strong with Bob Brickey, 185; Tom Jozwiak, 210; Charlie Rodgers, 200, and Sam Hardage, 190. Brockey caught four touchdowns passes and Jozwiak two.

The Falcons are due to assemble in Dallas today. The 44-man squad broke practice last Friday for the Christmas holiday, and should be without injuries for the game.

The Academy isn't overconfident. "That team's pursuit is tremendous," Coach Martin said of TCU. "Especially, I think it's tremendous for so big a team as TCU."

Clemson Club To Leave For Biloxi Today

CLEMSON, S. C. (AP) — Coach Frank Howard and his Clemson squad leave Saturday for their date with LSU's undefeated national champions in the Jan. 1 Sugar Bowl game.

Clemson romped through a brisk two-hour drill to close out the home field phase of pre-game drills. Third string fullback Harold Olson missed the drill because of a troublesome ankle.

The Atlantic Coast Conference champions will leave Greenville at 9 a. m. Saturday for Biloxi, Miss., where four workouts have been scheduled prior to the departure for New Orleans the day before the game.

Forty-seven players, eight coaches, two managers, two trainers, the team physician, sports writers and press aides will make up the traveling party of 71.

Practices at Biloxi's high school stadium will be open to the public. They begin at 3 p. m. The team breaks camp there next Wednesday morning. After a drill in the Sugar Bowl Stadium that afternoon, the team will spend New Year's Eve at nearby Callender Naval Air Station.

Clemson worked on defense and offense Friday. The first three units had half an hour each of offense, with the fourth team furnishing opposition. A 45-minute session on defense ended the day's work.

No. 1 fullback Rudy Hayes and top center Bill Thomas, who missed two workouts before the squad took off for Christmas, were back in action. Olson is expected to be back in full practice in the Biloxi drills.

SHRINE BOWL

East Touchdown Pick Over West

By JACK STEVENSON
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) Plans of the West to go around or over the bulky East defenses Saturday in the annual Shrine football game met with opposition from an outside source Friday—the weather.

Rain fell during the morning, but clearing skies were possible by the 2 p. m., PST, kickoff in Kezar Stadium for this nationally televised (NBC) game.

So the East remained a solid one touchdown favorite, with the men of Coach Duffy Daugherty expected to stay on the ground with a running attack.

On defense, the Easterners boast a forward wall averaging 218 pounds so Coach Jack Curtice of the West has centered his offense plans on forward passing and speed.

A capacity crowd of about 60,000 was expected for this 34th annual charity game for the Shrine Hospital for Crippled Children.

Utah's quarterback Lee Grosscup, an ace passer, was named starting quarterback.

With Grosscup in the starting backfield for the West will be Leon Burton of Arizona State, Colorado's Boyd Dowler, and Baylor's Larry Hickman.

The West lost an ace pass catcher when All-America end Buddy Dial of Rice suffered a sprained ankle in practice.

Starting ends will be Dick Walen of UCLA and Ron Slover of Oregon. At tackles are Bill Leeka of UCLA and Troy Barbee of Stanford, with Oregon's Bob Grottkau and Baylor's Charlie Horton at guard and Stanford's Roch Conklin at center.

The East starters on offense are Jerry Wilson, Auburn, and Tom Frankhauser, Purdue, ends; Fran O'Brien, Michigan State, and Bob Novogratz, Army, tackles; Dan Frank, Ohio State, and Al Eucuyer, Notre Dame, guards, and Mike Svendsen, Minnesota, center.

Svendsen and Notre Dame's Bronko Nagurski Jr., a tackle on defense, bring the second generation into this game. Fathers of the two started here in past years.

Collegiate rules are played except that unlimited substitution will be in effect.

Bengals Work On Kicking In Hard Practice

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Coach Paul Dietzel ran his Louisiana State team hard Friday as the national champions began final drills for their Sugar Bowl date with Clemson.

LSU, ending a five-day Christmas vacation, hustled through a two-hour workout that concentrated heavily on kickoffs, extra points, field goals and punts.

The squad showed great spirit in the workout under a chilly, cloudy sky. Lights were turned on early in the drill.

The fine kicking of fullback Tommy Davis featured the drill, as he lofted the ball 60 to 70 yards consistently.

The workout ended with a no contact offensive session and practice in goal line offense.

Both fullback J. W. Brodnax and All America halfback Billy Cannon, hobbled with minor injuries when LSU ended pre-Christmas work last Saturday, were back at full speed.

CONTRAST TO IOWA

Bears Solemn On Arrival At Bowl

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — An unusually solemn California football squad arrived on the Rose Bowl front Friday and promptly resumed preparations for its New Year's Day battle with Iowa.

The major portion of the Golden Bear contingent flew in from Berkeley, led by amiable but business like Coach Pete Elliott.

There was no banter as the 30 or more players stepped off their chartered plane at nearby Burbank Airport.

News cameramen had to beg the footballers to smile and wave for pictures.

Their attitude was in marked contrast to the arrival of the Hawkeyes last week. The Big Ten champions needed no urging for a show of happy spirits.

Big Joe Kapp, the Bears' quarterback and key performer, one of the last to leave the plane, produced a warm smile at last, but mainly as he posed with his coach and Elliott's two youngsters, David, 6, and Bruce, 8.

The squad was taken by bus to join the rest of the outfit at a Los Angeles hotel, their quarters for the Rose Bowl stay. More than a dozen of the Bears arrived early to spend Christmas at their homes in this area.

There was no fanfare except for the formal welcome to Elliott & Co., by the Tournament of Roses football committeemen, Lathrop K. Leishman, John Bigger and William Nicholas.

Friday night the tournament committee gave the California team a post-Christmas party, presenting the players with binoculars as it did the Iowa squad.

Elliott said his team is in sound physical condition. There is much work to be done, however, to regain regular season form, Elliott added.

The Bears took their first workout—at Beverly Hills High School—in the afternoon, and a rough one it was, with more coming up Saturday.

Coach Forest Evashevski had a similar pattern set for his team. There is a possibility both squads will work out Sunday.

Dallas Possible Site For Service Football Games

DALLAS (AP)—The Air Force Academy athletic director Friday nominated Dallas as a site for possible academy football games with Army and Navy.

Col. George Simler, arriving with the first players and officials for the Cotton Bowl game Jan. 1, told newsmen, "I'd like to play Army and Navy on a home-away basis two out of three years, with our home games being played in Denver."

"The third year, I'd like to see the games played at a neutral site. I'd like to play them in Dallas."

Col. Simler said about 800 of the academy's 1,100 cadets will be at the game.

TELEVISION NOTES

Ballet Stunning For 90 Minutes

NEW YORK (UPI)—CBS-TV's Playhouse 90 unpackaged a nut-cracker ballet Thursday night that contained some of the most dazzling sequences of the season.

In a way, it was one of the most curious TV shows I have ever seen since it managed to surmount some particulars that were almost unbearably candid: A cloying narration written by Leo Lerman, the delivery of that narration by June Lockhart and the opening sequences in which children and grownups engaged in the dreariest sort of frivolity.

But once the camera cleared these syrupy hurdles and moved inside the dream sequences that covered roughly the last half of the production, the show was a stunner. The New York City Ballet was on hand and Playhouse 90 wrapped the company in a superb production, all of it beamed out in an elegant color.

Dance fan or not, it was worth 90 minutes of anybody's time just to catch young Allegra Kent in action as "Dew Drop." Her technique is still a little knobby and she lets a slight sloppiness slip into her work. But it is a sloppiness that springs from enthusiasm and it's a pleasure to watch her dance. She is developing a long and beautiful line and something plus that I guess could be called presence. It's too bad that TV doesn't make more use of talents like hers. She's a comer.

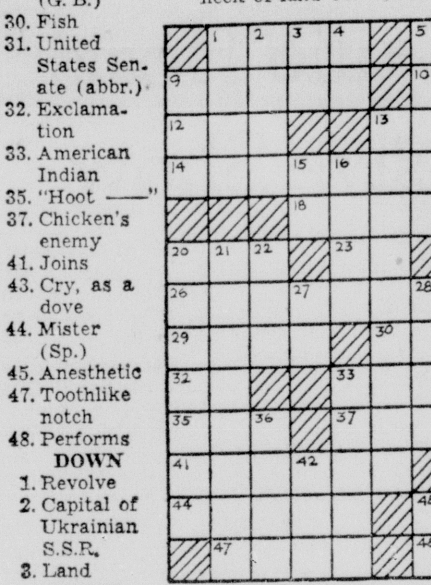

The rest of the company also worked well. Diana Adams, a dancer with a fine line, turned in an awfully slick contribution as the "sugar plum fairy" and Judith Green unleashed some splendid technique in the role of the "Marzipan princess."

I guess in something like this a good deal of credit should go to director Ralph Nelson and to George Balanchine who staged the whole business. Okay, herewith affix two credits.

Short Circles: CBS-TV's Armstrong Circle Theatre was about the only TV show on Christmas Eve to display enough initiative to trot out some of the less popular Christmas carols — "Silent Night" is a lovely carol, but two full weeks of it can be pretty trying. It's heartening to see NBC-TV's behind closed doors saw the world each week from war. Last week, its hero foiled a plot to kill King Hussein of Jordan and Thursday

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Yule Fireworks Result In Loss Of Eye, Hand

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
A 32-year-old father of four children lost his left hand and a 12-year-old boy lost an eye as a result of fireworks over the Christmas holidays in Mississippi.

Dan Miles of Boyle, 10-year-old Negro boy lost his left eye Christmas morning when he was shot with an air rifle while playing in a friend's yard.

Hospital authorities said William J. Davis, 32, of Picaune, lost his left hand through amputation after a large firecracker exploded while he held it.

Bruce Collier of Boyle lost his right eye when a box of fireworks was shooting exploded near his face.

At Least 62 Die In Tragic Fires

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Death by fire brought a tragic ending to many a happy holiday celebration in homes throughout the nation. At least 62 persons—many of them children—lost their lives during the past two days.

Fathers and mothers also were among the victims. Dozens of others suffered serious or critical injuries in flaming dwellings.

A ghastly blaze at a farm near Auburn, Wash., snuffed out the lives of Mrs. Ole Hollenbach, 38, and eight of her nine children. The youngsters ranged in age from 4 to 18.

The father and a daughter, 7, survived. The father, a turkey grower, said he believed the fire began with a short circuit in a wire to an electric kitchen clock. He said the house seemed to explode in flames in the moment it took him to rush outside for a fire extinguisher.

Five of the six members of the family of Horace A. Gray Jr. died when flames roared through their $150,000, 15-room mansion in the exclusive Windsor Farms suburb of Richmond, Va.

Gray, one of the victims, was a director of the West Virginia Pulp & Paper Co. He was 49.

Found dead in the home with him were his wife, Catherine, 47; two sons, Thomas, 17 and Foster, 13; and a daughter, Susan Lee, 19. A third son, Horace A. Gray III, was not at home at the time. In Pennsylvania, two families lost three children each in flaming homes, and a father and son perished in another.

Three children of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Degan died in an early Christmas morning fire at their Wilkes-Barre home despite desperate attempts by the parents to reach them. The children were Deborah, 4; Donald, 2, and Edward Jr., 1.

At Braddock, Pa., a suburb of Pittsburgh, the Robert Fletcher family lost three children, Eddie, 7; Cary, 4; and Grace, 2 months. The 42-year-old father and another son, Willie, 11, were burned critically. The mother and two other sons, 7 and 8, escaped with less serious injury.

Paul Winger Sr., 32, and his 3-year-old son, Paul Jr., died in a fire at their home at St. Petersburg, Fla. Winger's wife and four other children escaped.

A blaze at the Admiral Inn, a two-story wooden lodging house at Northampton, Mass., cost the lives of three persons. They were Roman J. Korza, 45; Elizabeth Latham, 63, and Dedmund S. Korpiemski, 11. It was Korpiemski's 37th birthday.

At Roanoke Rapids, N.C., two brothers burned to death when a lighted match accidentally was dropped onto some cotton under a Christmas tree. The cotton burst in flames and quickly ignited the house.

The children, sons of Mr. and Mrs. James Burton, were Jim, 4, and Chev, 2.

WEST OBSERVERS BELIEVE

Gromyko's Talk Is Hopeful Sign

MOSCOW (UPI)—Western observers here saw some reason for optimism Friday in Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko's speech agreeing to hear Western arguments on Berlin.

Diplomats sloughed over the usual denunciations and threats to the West contained in Gromyko's speech to the Supreme Soviet (Parliament) Thursday and read into it a new Russian plea for a round-table conference on major powers.

Gromyko said the Berlin problem must be settled peacefully lest it lead to a third world war which "would inevitably spread to the American continent." He repeated Soviet declarations that the "most correct" solution was talks between "the countries directly concerned," the familiar Soviet demand for direct negotiations between East and West Germany.

Western observers pointed out the foreign minister expressed readiness to "hear and discuss any Western ideas" designed to solve the Berlin problem. They conceded Russia remained firm on ending the four-power occupation of Berlin, but they said if the Western powers did not reject the Soviet proposals out of hand and submit counter proposals, there was hope for compromise.

Diplomats in London were more pessimistic over Gromyko's speech. They pointed to the threats on Berlin, and the warning that Russia was not prepared to accept the West's demanded control safeguards for a ban on nuclear tests, as signs of a toughening Soviet stand on major issues.

The London diplomats interpreted Gromyko's words on Berlin as meaning Russia had no intention of discussing the Berlin problem within the wider framework of German reunification—as suggested by the West.

Observers in Moscow paid little attention to Gromyko's verbal attacks on the West in which he said failure to settle the Berlin question could start a new war "in which millions of people would find their death." The observers pointed out Soviet leaders have been saying this ever since the Berlin crisis started.

The observers said they based their hopes for a negotiated settlement of the Berlin crisis on the fact that Gromyko's address was a major Soviet government policy pronouncement, and that it did not slam the door completely on Western attempts at a solution.

Murder Suspect Held By Police After Near Riot

BATON ROUGE (AP)—Police held a 24-year-old Negro for murder Friday after the rifle slaying of another led to a near riot.

Officers said James Moore was booked on the charge in the Christmas Day killing of Charles Augustus, 26.

An angry mob of about 300 persons hurled rocks and chunks of concrete at Moore and his brother, Edgar, 27, after the death of Augustus, police said.

Detectives said this is what happened: The brother, Edgar, drove up to visit James when Augustus reportedly accused him of reckless driving. Edgar accused Augustus of swinging at him, and pulled a knife, slashing Augustus in the face.

Then he heard a noise like a firecracker, he told officers, saw Augustus slump, and turned to see his brother with a rifle 30 feet away.

Clint Walker Ends Lengthy Suspension

By JAMES BACON
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Clint Walker, 6-foot-6 actor who created television's "Cheyenne," Friday ended an eight-month suspension by Warner Bros.

Because he walked out, the studio had to make this year's series with Ty Hardin substituting for Walker, who sat out his suspension prospecting for gold in northern California. Hardin played another character, Bronco Layne.

Jack L. Warner, studio head, said that Hardin would continue playing Layne in the ABC-TV series. Warner added that TV and movie plans for Walker would be announced on his return to the studio after Jan. 1.

Walker is expected to resume as Cheyenne, probably alternating with Hardin as Jim Garner and Jack Kelly do in the "Maverick" series, another Warner's production.

Walker stalked out, claiming he was underpaid. He was a deputy sheriff policing Las Vegas gambling casinos before Warner put him under contract. His pay when he left was $1,500 a week.

Besides money, he wanted other roles. "I want to get into feature pictures," he said, "that's the Cadillac section of this business."

Rail Crossing Accident Injures Elderly NY Man

JONESBORO (Special A)—A Brooklyn, N. Y. man was seriously injured when his car hit a railroad flatcar on a seldom-used spur line south of Ruston on U.S. Highway 167 yesterday afternoon.

Officers identified the man as Julius Notkn, about 60. Notkn was traveling north and was alone.

50 Persons Die In Bolivia Flood

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP)—Fifty persons have lost their lives in a flood at Charagua, in lowland eastern Bolivia, government reports from the area said Friday.

Damage was described as heavy but there was no official estimate of its extent. The flood followed heavy rains.

The town is near the Paraguayan border, 120 miles southeast of the provincial capital of Santa Cruz.

Popes Head 1958 Stories Of Religion

NEW YORK (UPI)—The death of Pope Pius XII and the coronation of Pope John XXIII led the list Friday of a leading Lutheran churchman's annual compilation of the 10 most significant religious news stories of the year.

Richard C. Sutcliffe, associate director of the Department of Press, Radio and Television of the United Lutheran Church in America, announced the list in his weekly "Church World News" religious newscast, to be carried Sunday by nearly 100 radio stations.

Ranking after the Vatican story on Sutcliffe's top-10 list were:

—Demands by Protestants and other groups united for separation of church and state that all Roman Catholic candidates for the U.S. presidency and vice-presidency take public stands on issues involving their religious philosophies.

—Gradual emergence in the South of the "Christian moderate" in the school integration crisis.

—Conviction and subsequent acquittal of the Italian Bishop of Prato on charges of defamation of character of a Florence couple who were not married in the Roman Catholic Church.

—The battle over prohibition of dissemination of birth control information to patients in New York City municipal hospitals.

—Nomination and elevation of 23 new Roman Catholic cardinals.

—Public debate set off by the National Council of Churches World Order Study Commission by urging U.S. recognition of Red China.

—Temperate discussions of religious affiliations of political candidates in last November's elections.

—A report on alcoholism by the Protestant Episcopal church's Study Commission in which moderate social drinking was not condemned.

—Merger of the United Presbyterian Church of North America with the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A.

Annual Musical Chair Game On In Washington

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The annual game of musical chairs has begun on Capitol Hill and this year it's worse than usual. Four newly elected House members have no place to hang their hats.

The game, of course, usually turns out to be more like a battle royal with moving men and congressmen all tangled up in the struggle to get retiring lawmakers moved out of their offices and new ones moved in before the new session convenes.

But this year it looks like they're going to have to clean out some broom closets or put up partitions in the basement of the House Office Building.

In a drawing for office assignments, four new members of the House came in last and as of Friday there isn't enough space to go around. The unlucky four are Reps. John Brademas (D-Ind.), Seymour Halpern (R-N.Y.), Robert W. Kastenmeier (D-Wis.) and J. Edward Roush (D-Ind.).

House officials who are in charge of that sort of thing assure that space will be found for the so far orphaned members. But it's going to be a tight squeeze.

Congress Solon Dies On Coast

SOUTH PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—Thomas F. Ford, 85, congressman from the 14th California District for six terms, died at his home Friday.

Ford served in Congress 1932-1944. He was a New Deal Democrat. He served on the House Foreign Affairs Committee and the Banking and Currency Committee and for several years was chief assistant majority whip. He was a lecturer on international trade at the University of Southern California from 1920-1921. For 10 years he was literary editor of the Los Angeles Times.

Ike Appoints New Director Of Security

WASHINGTON (AP)—A "right guy," as associates describe him, is taking over as the first career federal worker to head the mammoth Social Security Administration.

However, William L. Mitchell has had plenty of training to fit him to be commissioner of social security, the job to which he was appointed today by President Eisenhower.

Mitchell, 58, has been the only deputy commissioner of the social security administration he has had since the job was created a dozen years ago. He has served as top aide to three commissioners.

Mitchell's first government work was in 1922 as a chain man on a surveying team here. In April, 1923, he joined the staff of the old Bureau of Domestic and Foreign Commerce and has been in government work since.

Now he will direct in its entirety the largest social insurance and social welfare operation of its kind in the world.

Under his guidance will be the old-age and survivors' insurance program—the portion most people refer to as social security—plus the federal-state public assistance programs, the children's bureau and the federal credit union.

Mitchell said today his appointment topped off what had already been a happy Christmas season.

Things at the Mitchell house have been centered largely about their son, Lt. John H. Mitchell, who is home on leave before taking up an artillery assignment in Korea. The Mitchells have three other children and four grandchildren.

Two Nations Dropped From Vatican Role

VATICAN CITY (AP)—The coronation of a new Pope has in effect dropped the representatives of the former governments of Poland and Lithuania from the Vatican diplomatic corps.

This became clear Friday as the diplomats who were accredited to the late Pope Pius XII began presenting their credentials to his successor, Pope John XXIII.

The two diplomats with no credentials to present are Casimir Papez, ambassador of the pre-World War II Polish regime who presented his credentials to Pope Pius on July 24, 1939, and Lithuanian Minister Stanislas Girvanavicius who presented his on Oct. 18, 1939.

Vatican sources said they are not expected to be among the representatives of some 50 nations who will call on Pope John during the next several days to present new credentials.

It was speculated in Vatican circles that Stefan Cardinal Wyszynski, primate of Poland, may have told Pope John during his recent visit in Rome that the Vatican's acceptance of Papez as the representative of Poland was embarrassing to his efforts to improve relations between the Church and the present Communist government.

Vatican circles said the deletion of Papez's name from the Vatican diplomatic list did not imply any improvement in relations with the present Warsaw regime. The Vatican at present does not have diplomatic relations with any Communist-governed country.

Ice Fishermen Pull Horse From Suburban Lake

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP)—Ice fishermen told of a 1,000-pound whopper they pulled from a lake in suburban Bloomington Friday.

He was big as a horse, they said. In fact, it was a horse.

John Hamilton, Bloomington, was ice fishing when he saw the horse sink through the ice up to his neck. Police called a tow truck but the vehicle couldn't get close enough.

Finally onlookers put a log under the horse's stomach, a rope around his neck and lifted by his tail. The horse came out. It took an hour and a half to land him.

Cuban Army Planning For Large Attack

HAVANA, Cuba (AP)—Government forces, suffering severe setbacks at the hands of insurgents in central Cuba, warned on Friday the army plans all-out air and ground counterattacks against rebel positions in populated places.

The proclamation from the 3rd Military District command in the province of Las Villas followed a series of successful rebel attacks which were lightening a ring around Santa Clara, the provincial capital.

The rebel radio had indicated the insurgents now aim to occupy cities in which they carry out successful attacks against army forces.

The rebels are reported setting up local civil governments, which are sitting outside the towns threatened, and preparing to demand the army plans all-out air and ground counterattacks against rebel positions in populated places.

The insurgent radio Friday also broadcast a prediction that rebel leader Fidel Castro's forces intend to be in Havana soon.

These developments came as the government, seemingly hampered by lack of sufficient arms, faced the possibility of reverses in Las Villas which could signal a turning point in the two-year-old rebellion.

The government warned the population that planes and troops would be used in force to repel rebel attacks wherever they occurred.

It advised all persons in areas where rooftops or houses are occupied by rebels to leave the vicinity at once. Persons staying in houses occupied by rebels will be regarded as belligerents, the proclamation warned. Already army planes are reported to have bombed the outskirts of Paez on the main highway east of Santa Clara.

CONFERS WITH MONGOLS
TOKYO (UPI)—Communist Chinese Premier Chou En-lai spent two hours in conference on Friday with a delegation from "the people's republic of Mongolia," an area considered a possible friction point between Peking and Moscow.

Slayer Of Son Is Bound Over By Grand Jury

CHICAGO (AP)—A coroner's jury Friday ruled that a father who fatally wounded his little boy while practicing a fast pistol draw was bound to the grand jury on an involuntary manslaughter charge.

Police testified they found about 75 bullet holes in the walls, windows and walls of the home of Jack Bender, 29, a furnace installer and gun fancier.

Bender's 11-month-old son, Wyatt, died Thursday of a .22-caliber bullet wound in the chest—a victim, authorities said, of his father's pistol practice.

Detective Michael Fitzgerald testified the death weapon was a model of a Remington-Union, a long-barreled hand gun made famous by such early day Western marshals as Wyatt Earp.

Bender is the father of five children. His wife, Elaine, 29, is expecting a sixth.

In Pennsylvania, two families lost three children each in flaming homes, and a father and son perished in another.

Three children of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Desnan died in an early Christmas morning fire at their Wilkes-Barre home despite desperate attempts by the parents to reach them. The children were Deborah, 4; Donald, 2, and Edward Jr., 1.

At Braddock, Pa., a suburb of Pittsburgh, the Robert Fletcher family lost three children, Eddie, 7; Cary, 4; and Grace, 2 months. The 42-year-old father and another son, Willie, 11, were burned critically. The mother and two other sons, 7 and 8, escaped with less serious injury.

Paul Winger Sr., 32, and his 3-year-old son, Paul Jr., died in a fire at their home at St. Petersburg, Pa. Winger's wife and four other children escaped.

A blaze at the Admiral Inn, a two-story wooden lodging house at Northampton, Mass., cost the lives of three persons. They were Roman J. Korza, 45; Elizabeth Latham, 63; and Dedmund S. Korpiemski. It was Korpiemski's 37th birthday.

At Roanoke Rapids, N.C., two brothers burned to death when a lighted match accidentally was dropped onto some cotton under a Christmas tree. The cotton burst in flames and quickly ignited the house.

The children, sons of Mr. and Mrs. James Burton, were Jim, 4, and Chev, 2.

WEST OBSERVERS BELIEVE
Gromyko's Talk
Is Hopeful Sign

MOSCOW (UPI) — Western observers here saw some reason for optimism Friday in Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko's speech agreeing to hear Western arguments on Berlin.

Diplomats sloughed over the usual denunciations and threats to the West contained in Gromyko's speech to the Supreme Soviet (Parliament) Thursday and read into it a new Russian plea for a round-table conference on major powers.

Gromyko said the Berlin problem must be settled peacefully lest it lead to a third world war which "would inevitably spread to the American continent." He repeated Soviet declarations that the "most correct" solution was talks between "the countries directly concerned," the familiar Soviet demand for direct negotiations between East and West Germany.

Western observers pointed out the foreign minister expressed readiness to "hear and discuss any Western ideas" designed to solve the Berlin problem. They conceded Russia remained firm on ending the four-power occupation of Berlin, but they said if the Western powers did not reject the Soviet proposals out of hand and submit counter proposals, there was hope for compromise.

Diplomats in London were more pessimistic over Gromyko's speech. They pointed to the threats on Berlin and the warning that Russia was not prepared to accept the West's demand for control safeguards for a ban on nuclear tests, as signs of a toughening Soviet stand on major issues.

(The London diplomats interpreted Gromyko's words on Berlin as meaning Russia had no intention of discussing the Berlin problem within the wider framework of German reunification—as suggested by the West.)

Observers in Moscow paid little attention to Gromyko's verbal attacks on the West in which he said failure to settle the Berlin question could start a new war "in which millions of people would find their death." The observers pointed out Soviet leaders have been saying this ever since the Berlin crisis started.

The observers said they based their hopes for a negotiated settlement of the Berlin crisis on the fact that Gromyko's address was a major Soviet government policy pronouncement, and that it did not slam the door completely on Western attempts at a solution.

Clint Walker
Ends Lengthy Suspension

By JAMES BACON
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Clint Walker, 6-foot-6 actor who created television's "Cheyenne," Friday ended an eight-months suspension by Warner Bros.

Because he walked out, the studio had to make this year's series with Ty Hardin, substituting for Walker, who sat out his suspension prospecting for gold in northern California. Hardin played another character, Bronco Layne.

Jack L. Warner, studio head, said that Hardin would continue playing Layne in the ABC-TV series. Warner added that TV and movie plans for Walker would be announced on his return to the studio after Jan. 1.

Walker is expected to resume as Cheyenne, probably alternating with Hardin as Jim Garner and Jack Kelly do in the "Maverick" series, another Warner's production.

Walker stalked out, claiming he was underpaid. He was a deputy sheriff policing Las Vegas gambling casinos before Warner's put him under contract. His pay when he left was $1,500 a week.

Besides money, he wanted other roles.

"I want to get into feature pictures," he said, "that's the Cadillac section of this business."

The front office and Walker stymied on contract talks and then Jack Warner was seriously injured in an automobile accident on the French Riviera last summer. He returned to the studio this month.

Studio sources say they have thousands of letters from fans asking for Walker's return.

Warner did not disclose the terms of Walker's return to the studio but said "the arrangements were amicable."

Rail Crossing
Accident Injures
Elderly NY Man

JONESBORO (Special) A Brooklyn, N. Y. man was seriously injured when his car hit a railroad flatcar on a rusted-on spur line south of a Hudson U.S. Highway 167 yesterday afternoon.

Officers identified the man as Julius Notkin, about 60.

Notkin was traveling north and was alone.

He was removed from the scene, about 12 miles south of Ruston, by an Edmonds Funeral Home ambulance, and taken to a Jonesboro clinic. He reportedly sustained severe rib injuries.

Popes Head
1958 Stories
Of Religion

NEW YORK (UPI) — The death of Pope Pius XII and the coronation of Pope John XXIII led the list Friday of a leading Lutheran churchman's annual compilation of the 10 most significant religious news stories of the year.

Richard J. Sutcliffe, associate director of the Department of Press, Radio and Television of the United Lutheran Church in America, announced the list in his weekly "Church World News" religious newscast, to be carried Sunday by nearly 100 radio stations.

Ranking after the Vatican story on Sutcliffe's top-10 list were:

—Demands by Protestants and other groups united for separation of church and state for the U.S. presidency and vice-presidential take public stands on issues involving their religious philosophies.

—Gradual emergence in the South of the "Christian moderate" in the school integration crisis.

—Conviction and subsequent acquittal of the Italian Bishop of Prato on charges of defamation of character of a Florence couple who were not married in the Roman Catholic Church.

—The battle over prohibition of dissemination of birth control information to patients in New York City municipal hospitals.

—Nomination and elevation of 23 new Roman Catholic cardinals.

Public debate set off by the National Council of Churches World Order Study Commission by urging U.S. recognition of Red China.

—Temperate discussions of religious affiliations of political candidates in last November's elections.

—A report on alcoholism by the Protestant Episcopal church's Study Commission in which moderate social drinking was not condemned.

—Merger of the United Presbyterian Church of North America with the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A.

Annual Musical Chair Game On
In Washington

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The annual game of musical chairs has begun on Capitol Hill and this year it's worse than usual. Four newly-elected House members have no place to hang their hats.

The game, of course, usually turns out to be more like a battle royal with moving men and congressmen all tangled up in the struggle to get retiring lawmakers moved out of their offices and new ones moved in before the new session convenes.

But this year it looks like they're going to have to clean out some broom closets or put up partitions in the basement of the House Office Building.

In a drawing for office assignments, four new members of the House came in last and as of Friday there isn't enough space to go around. The unlucky four are Reps. John Brademas (D-Ind.), Seymour Halpern (R-N.Y.), Robert W. Kastenmeier (D-Wis.) and J. Edward Roush (D-Ind.).

House officials who are in charge of that sort of thing assure that space will be found for the so-far orphaned members. But it's going to be a tight squeeze.

Congress Solon
Dies On Coast

SOUTH PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Thomas F. Ford, 65, congressman from the 14th California District for six terms, died at his home Friday.

Ford served in Congress 1932-1944. He was a New Deal Democrat. He served on the House Foreign Affairs Committee and the Banking and Currency Committee and for several years was chief assistant majority whip. He was a lecturer on international trade at the University of Southern California from 1920-1921. For 10 years he was literary editor of the Los Angeles Times.

Ike Appoints
New Director Of Security

WASHINGTON (AP) — A "right guy," as associates describe him, is taking over as the first career federal worker to head the mammoth Social Security Administration.

However, William L. Mitchell has had plenty of training to fit him to be commissioner of social security, the job to which he was appointed today by President Eisenhower.

Mitchell, 58, has been the only deputy commissioner the social security administration has had since the job was created a dozen years ago. He has served as top aide to three commissioners.

Mitchell's first government work was in 1922 as a chain man on a surveying team here. In April, 1923, he joined the staff of the old Bureau of Domestic and Foreign Commerce and has been in government work since.

Now he will direct in its entirety the largest social insurance and social welfare operation of its kind in the world.

Under his guidance will be the old-age and survivors' insurance program—the portion most people refer to as social security—plus the federal-state public assistance programs, the children's bureau and the federal credit union.

Mitchell said today his appointment topped off what had already been a happy Christmas season.

Things at the Mitchell house have been centered largely about their son, Lt. John H. Mitchell, who is home on leave before taking up an artillery assignment in Korea. The Mitchells have three other children and four grandchildren.

Two Nations Dropped From Vatican Role

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The coronation of a new Pope has in effect dropped the representatives of the former governments of Poland and Lithuania from the Vatican diplomatic corps.

This became clear Friday as the diplomats who were accredited to the late Pope Pius XII began presenting their credentials to his successor, Pope John XXIII.

The two diplomats with no credentials to present are Casimir Papee, ambassador of the pre-World War II Polish regime who presented his credentials to Pope Pius on July 24, 1939, and Lithuanian Minister Stanislas Girdvanis who presented his on Oct. 18, 1939.

Vatican sources said they are not expected to be among the representatives of some 50 nations who will call on Pope John during the next several days to present new credentials.

It was speculated in Vatican circles that Stefan Cardinal Myszynski, primate of Poland, may have told Pope John during his recent visit in Rome that the Vatican's acceptance of Papee as the representative of Poland was embarrassing to his efforts to improve relations between the Church and the present Communist government.

Vatican circles said the deletion of Papee's name did not imply any improvement in relations with the present Warsaw regime. The Vatican at present does not have diplomatic relations with any Communist-governed country.

Ice Fishermen Pull Horse From Suburban Lake

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — Ice fishermen told of a 1,000-pound whopper they pulled from a lake in suburban Bloomington Friday.

He was big as a horse, they said. In fact, it was a horse.

John Hamilton, Bloomington, was ice fishing when he saw the horse sink through the ice up to his neck. Police called a tow truck but the vehicle couldn't get close enough.

Finally onlookers put a log under the horse's stomach, a rope around his neck and lifted by his tail. The horse came out. It took an hour and a half to land him.

Cuban Army Planning For Large Attack

HAVANA, Cuba (AP) — Government forces, suffering severe setbacks at the hands of insurgents in central Cuba, warned civilians Friday the army plans all-out air and ground counterattacks against rebel positions in populated places.

The proclamation from the 3rd Military District command in the province of Las Villas followed a series of successful rebel attacks which were tightening a ring around Santa Clara, the provincial capital.

The rebel radio had indicated the insurgents now aim to occupy cities in which they carry out successful attacks against army forces.

The rebels are reported setting up local civil governments, which are sitting outside the towns threatened, and preparing to demand the areas be declared open so that they can be safely occupied without presenting concentrated targets.

The insurgent radio Friday also broadcast a prediction that rebel leader Fidel Castro's forces intend to be in Havana soon.

These developments came as the government, seemingly hampered by lack of sufficient arms, faced the possibility of reverses in Las Villas which could signal a turning point in the two-year-old rebellion. The government warned the population that planes and troops would be used in force to repel rebel attacks wherever they occurred.

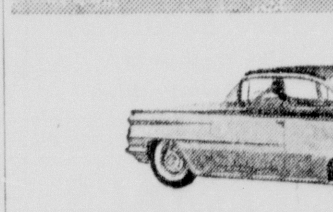

It advised all persons in areas where rooftops or houses are occupied by rebels to leave the vicinity at once. Persons staying in houses occupied by rebels will be regarded as belligerents, the proclamation warned. Already army planes are reported to have bombed the outskirts of Placetas on the main highway east of Santa Clara.

CONFERS WITH MONGOLS

Sitter Charged
In Baby's Death

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A teenage baby-sitter who admitted beating an infant to death because he couldn't stand its bawling was charged with second-degree murder Friday.

James Harold Guin, 19, a bakery worker, was accused of the Christmas Eve slaying of Thomas N. Faulconer, son of Mrs. Marian N. Faulconer, a 21-year-old divorcee.

The charge carries a maximum penalty of life imprisonment.

Slayer Of Son
Is Bound Over
By Grand Jury

CHICAGO (AP) — A coroner's jury Friday ruled that a father who fatally wounded his little boy while practicing a fast pistol draw be bound to the grand jury on an involuntary manslaughter charge.

Police testified they found about 75 bullet holes in the woodwork and walls of the home of Jack Bender, 29, a furnace installer and gun fancier.

Bender's 14-month-old son, Wyatt, died Thursday of a .22-caliber bullet wound in the chest—a victim, authorities said, of his father's pistol practice.

Detective Michael Fitzgerald testified the death weapon was a model of a Remington-Union, a long-barreled hand gun made famous by such early day Western marshals as Wyatt Earp.

Bender is the father of five children. His wife, Elaine, 29, is expecting a sixth.

Gypsy Tribe King For 20 Years Dies

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A glass of water and a weird chant Friday signified that Walter Miguel, 49, king of the Miguel Gypsy tribe more than 20 years, is dead.

Miguel died at a local hospital last night of a kidney ailment as a dozen of his far-flung tribe stood watch. At King Walter's death, a chant began. Friday a glass of water was placed in the hospital window. It must remain there three days.

Hospital spokesmen said about 25 of the Miguel tribe camped in the hospital after Miguel was admitted for treatment last week. The gypsy king resided here. In earlier days, the tribe had its headquarters at Oklahoma City. But recently many of the 500 or more "wanderers" moved away from Oklahoma City.

A nephew, who declined to be identified, said the tribe now is scattered to New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Miami, Beaumont, and New Orleans. Some remain in Oklahoma City, the old tribal capital.

The nephew said the water in the window is for the king's soul, and is required by the gypsies' religion.

Miguel is survived by his widow and seven children, the youngest three months old.

He was in a coma for six days. His tribesmen during that time took over two solariums reserved

Truman Hopeful 1959 To Bring Bountiful Peace

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former President Truman said Friday he hoped there would be "peace and prosperity for the whole world" during the coming year. It was a hope, not a prediction, he added.

"I don't attempt to be a prophet," Truman said. But he spoke more confidently of this country's future. He said he believed the nation's gross national production some day would reach a "thousand billion dollars—a trillion."

The former President said the recent successful firing of the Atlas satellite had surprised some "pessimistic columnists."

"But I am an optimist," he said. "I think we'll always come out on top. We can always do things better than anyone when we're forced into it."

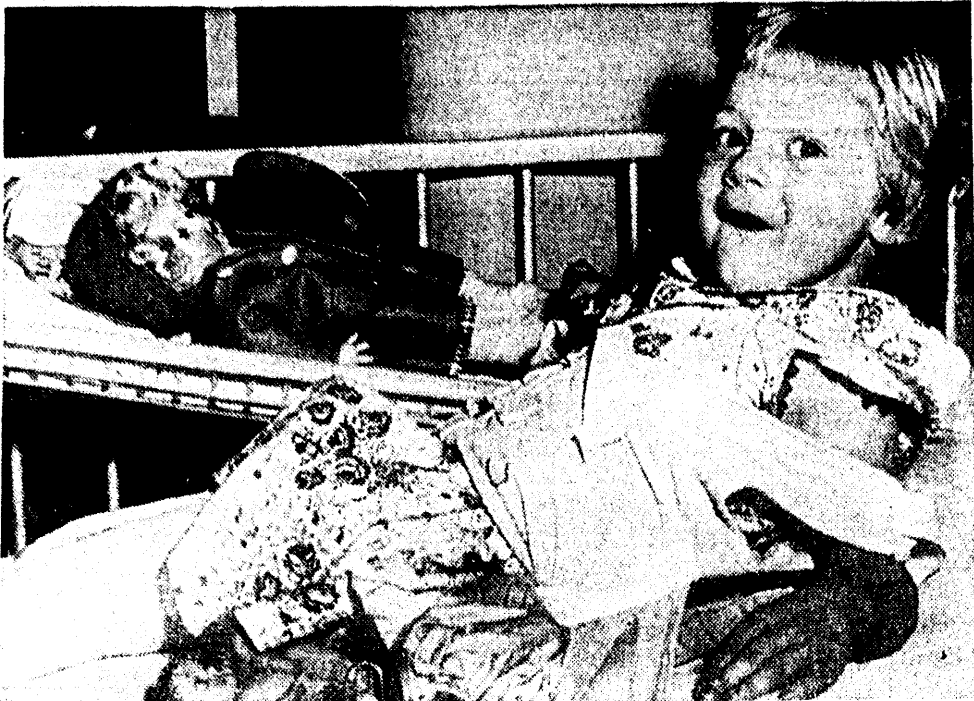

The former President made his comments during a 35-minute early morning walk with newsmen in 16-degree temperature.

for relatives and friends of patients. In colorful costumes, they slept on the solarium couches and floors.

The body was removed Friday to a funeral parlor. Details of funeral arrangements were incomplete.

Tribal spokesmen said a successor to King Miguel cannot be named by the tribe for one year.

'LOOK WHAT SANTA BROUGHT' All that Christmas means to a child is summed up in the wide-eyed look of four-year-old Gail Marie, after Santa visited her and other youngsters in the Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children in San Francisco Thursday. Saturday the East and West grid teams clash in the annual Shrine classic there, proceeds of which goes to the benefit of Shrine hospitals for crippled children. (AP Wirephoto)

Bishops In U. S. Sign Statement On Persecution

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Roman Catholic bishops of the United States joined Friday in a statement saying their Church is undergoing "the worst persecution in the two thousand years of Christianity."

"The persecution of the Church and God continues with undiminished savagery in the lands of the atheistic materialism," the bishops said.

"Our Catholic brethren are denied the freedom to profess and to practice their religion. In some countries even the right to exist has been taken from them and they are being hounded to death in a grim, silent war of extinction. "Many of them, only God knows how many, have already died for their sacred convictions. Many more are imprisoned and subjected to the most revolting tortures in order to force them to abjure their faith.

State Death Toll For Yule Totals Eight

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The count of deaths from Christmas Holidays accidents reached eight Friday.

Traffic killed four persons, fires three and strangulation one. Five of the accident victims died Christmas Day.

An additional death on Christmas Day was caused by injuries received in a car crash at Homer, La., Tuesday, before the count of holiday deaths began. The victim, Moreland Stokes, 19, of Lisbon, died at a Shreveport hospital. The official toll reached eight with the death of Lonnie Hamilton, 52-year-old Rodessa Negro. Officers said Hamilton's car struck a mule, went out of control and hit a utility pole south of Vivian Thursday.

Two New Orleans children burned to death Christmas night when fire destroyed their home. They were Willie and Angie Owens, both 2-year-old Negroes. Firemen said an overturned stove may have started the fire.

A Christmas Night collision near New Orleans killed Mrs. James Nash, 34, of New Orleans. Her husband and six other persons were hurt in the two-car crash.

Barbara Ann Cook, 9-week-old New Orleans girl, apparently strangled in her bed Christmas

Cut-Rate Offer To Build Palace Angers Japanese

TOKYO (UPI)—A contractor of the old school vowed Friday to build a part of Crown Prince Akihito's new palace for $27.78 despite a popular uproar and government pressure to withdraw the "insulting" cut-rate offer.

Akihito and his bride - to-be, Michiko Shoda, will live in the palace when it is finished.

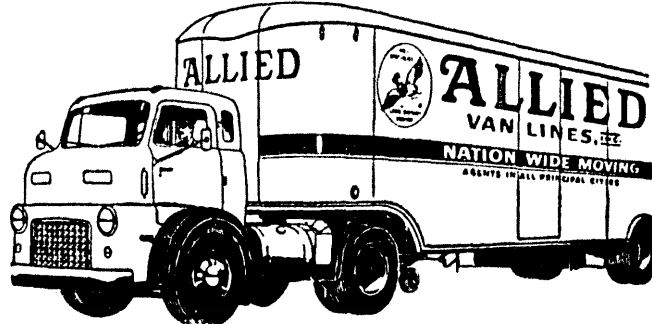

A collision Christmas Eve in Franklin killed Bertoul P. Chera-mie, 63, of Houma. Mrs. Dorothy Bonvillian, Houma, driver of the other car, was charged with negligent homicide.

Ora Lee Dickerson, 32, of Morganza, was killed near Opelousas in a traffic crash Christmas Eve.

Gypsy Tribe King For 20 Years Dies

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A glass of water and a weird chant Friday signified that Walter Miguel, 49, king of the Miguel Gypsy tribe more than 20 years, is dead.

Miguel died at a local hospital last night of a kidney ailment as a dozen of his far-flung tribe stood watch. At King Walter's death, a chant began. Friday a glass of water was placed in the hospital window. It must remain there three days.

Hospital spokesmen said about 25 of the Miguel tribe camped in the hospital after Miguel was admitted for treatment last week.

The gypsy king resided here. In earlier days, the tribe had its headquarters at Oklahoma City. But recently many of the 500 or more "wanderers" moved away from Oklahoma City.

A nephew, who declined to be identified, said the tribe now is scattered to New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Miami, Beaumont, and New Orleans. Some remain in Oklahoma City, the old tribal capital.

The nephew said the water in the window is for the king's soul, and is required by the gypsies' religion.

Miguel is survived by his widow and seven children, the youngest three months old.

He was in a coma for six days. His tribesmen during that time took over two solariums reserved

Truman Hopeful 1959 To Bring Bountiful Peace

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former President Truman said Friday he hoped there would be "peace and prosperity for the whole world" during the coming year. It was a hope, not a prediction, he added.

"I don't attempt to be a prophet," Truman said.

But he spoke more confidently of this country's future. He said he believed the nation's gross national production some day would reach a "thousand billion dollars—a trillion."

The former President said the recent successful firing of the Atlas satellite had surprised some "pessimistic columnists."

"But I am an optimist," he said. "I think we'll always come out on top. We can always do things better than anyone when we're forced into it."

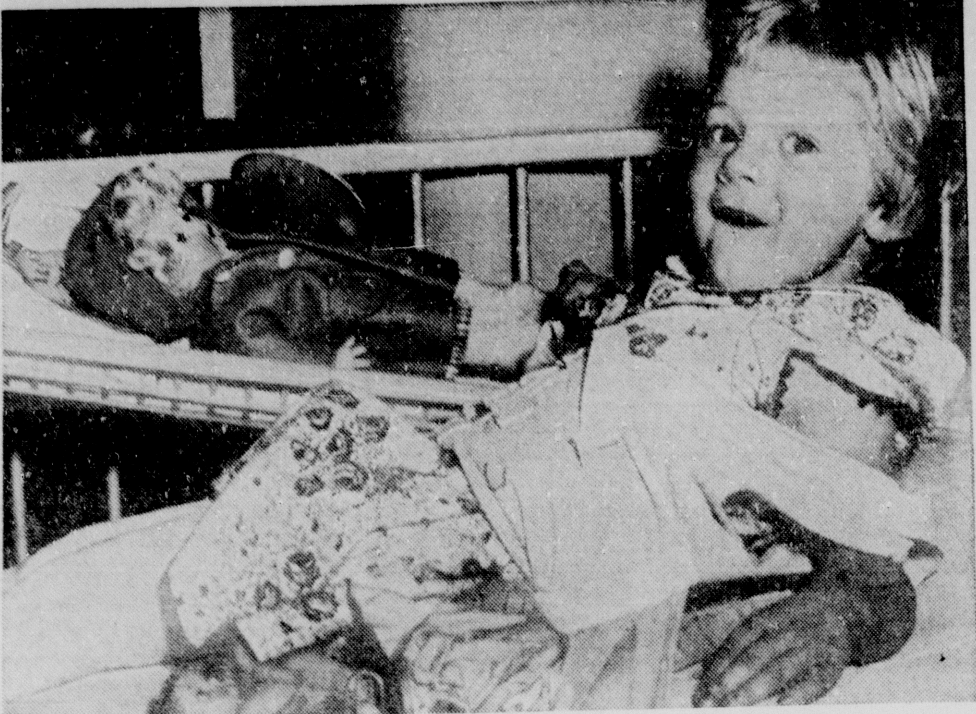

The former President made his comments during a 35-minute early morning walk with newsmen in 16-degree temperature.

for relatives and friends of patients. In colorful costumes, they slept on the solarium couches and floors.

When the gypsy king died, the tribesmen surrounded his charity ward bed. They held lighted candles and chanted a weird death ceremony.

The body was removed Friday to a funeral parlor. Details of funeral arrangements were incomplete.

Tribal spokesmen said a successor to King Miguel cannot be named by the tribe for one year.

Bishops In U.S. Sign Statement On Persecution

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Roman Catholic bishops of the United States joined Friday in a statement saying their Church is undergoing "the worst persecution in the two thousand years of Christianity."

"The persecution of the Church and God continues with undiminished savagery in the lands of atheistic materialism," the bishops said.

"Our Catholic brethren are denied the freedom to profess and to practice their religion. In some countries even the right to exist has been taken from them and they are being hounded to death in a grim, silent war of extinction."

"Many of them, only God knows how many, have already died for their sacred convictions. Many more are imprisoned and subjected to the most revolting tortures in order to force them to abjure their faith."

State Death Toll For Yule Totals Eight

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The count of deaths from Christmas Holidays accidents reached eight Friday.

Traffic killed four persons, fires three and strangulation one. Five of the accident victims died Christmas Day.

An additional death on Christmas Day was caused by injuries received in a car crash at Homer, La., Tuesday, before the count of holiday deaths began. The victim, Moreland Stokes, 19, of Louisiana, died at a Shreveport hospital.

The official toll reached eight with the death of Lonnie Hamilton, 52-year-old Rodessa Negro. Officers said Hamilton's car struck a mule, went out of control and hit a utility pole south of Vivian Thursday.

Two New Orleans children burned to death Christmas night when fire destroyed their home. They were Willie and Angie Owens, both 2-year-old Negroes. Firemen said an overturned stove may have started the fire.

A Christmas Night collision near New Orleans killed Mrs. James Nash, 54, of New Orleans. Her husband and six other persons were hurt in the two-car crash.

Miss Rose Kinsella, 80, of New Orleans, was burned fatally when her houserobe caught fire from a heater in her home Christmas Day.

Cut-Rate Offer To Build Palace Angers Japanese

TOKYO (UPI) — A contractor of the old school vowed Friday to build a part of Crown Prince Akihito's new palace for $27.78 despite a popular uproar and government pressure to withdraw the "insulting" cut-rate offer.

Akihito and his bride - to-be, Michiko Shoda, will live in the palace when it is finished.

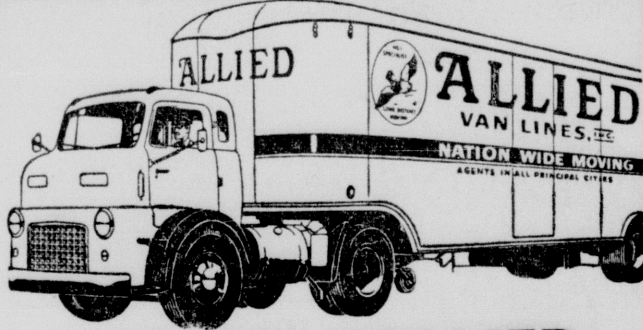

Day on her milk bottle.

A collision Christmas Eve in Franklin killed Bertoul P. Chera-mie, 63, of Houma. Mrs. Dorothy Bonvillian, Houma, driver of the other car, was charged with negligent homicide.

Ora Lee Dickerson, 32, of Morganza, was killed near Opelousas in a traffic crash Christmas Eve.
